TOBACCO AND SNUFF TRUST

Ten Men Are in Full Control of the Business.

ALL COMPETITION WELL THROTTLED

Men Gain Hold by All Manner of Schemes.

They Do the Fiercest Price Cutting the World Ever Witnessed—The Conclusions Reached by Herbert Knox Smith, Chief of the Bureau of Corporations—An Investigation of Trust Methods.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 25.—Ten men absolutely control the tobacco and snuff business of this continent with the exception of the manufacture of cigars, and this colossal trust which they manage has within the last few years throttled almost every vestige of real competition. They have gained their hold on the trade by the use of vast sums of money, by deceiving the public, by resorting to criminal schemes, and by the fiercest price-cutting that the commercial world has ever known.

These are, in brief, the conclusions reached by Herbert Knox Smith, chief of the bureau of corporations, the muck-raking end of the department of commerce and labor. Mr. Smith's second report of his report on the tobacco industry was made public today and in it he deals with the organization of the combination, its degree of control, its growth, and its present overpowering position in the trade. In future chapters of his story, he will tell the president, he will handle the subjects of prices, profits, and unfair methods.

The Tobacco Combines.

The American Tobacco company and its three great subsidiary combinations—the American Snuff company, the American Cigar company, and the British-American company—comprises some eighty-two subsidiary concerns in the United States, Cuba and Porto Rico according to the Smith report. Ten stockholders are alleged to control sixty per cent. of the stock of the mammoth concern, and these are: J. B. Duke, president of the company; A. N. Brady, O. H. Payne, P. A. B. Widener, Thomas F. Ryan, B. N. Duke, G. B. Schley, the brokerage firm of Moore & Schley, and the estates of W. C. Whitney and W. L. Elkins. Twenty-eight directors own nearly seventy-seven per cent. of the stock but for all practical purposes say the report, the ten named here long dictate the policy of the combination, which represents a total capitalization of $316,000,000. According to the report, the concern controls eighty-two per cent. of the tobacco business of the country, seventy-seven per cent. of the manufactured tobacco—chewing, smoking, fine cut and snuff—and fourteen per cent. of the cigars. In 1906 the American Tobacco company used in its manufacturing plants 100,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco.

Method of Absorption.

Mr. Smith's description of competitive methods and of the changes through combination within the last decade may be had," says Mr. Smith, "from the fact that in 1897 the combination had ten plants each producing over 50,000 pounds of tobacco products a year, while there were 243 independent plants of the same type. In 1906, on the other hand, the combination had forty-five plants of this size and 685 independent manufacturers. The decrease conspicuous has been in the production of large plants. In 1897 the combination had eight plants each producing over 1,000,000 pounds of these products per year, while its competitors had forty-six such plants. In 1906 the combination had but sixteen plants of this size and 185 independent concerns only seven."

One of the favorite plans of the trust, Mr. Smith says, was to buy up a competent plant that had made a reputation on its antitrust record. Dealing with union labor, or [illegible] enjoyed squareness to its [illegible] and to operate it still as an "open alden," or "anti-trust" concern.

Purchases Outright.

Many of the plants it purchased or controlled were operated [illegible] manner, it is charged. The [illegible] of the tobacco trade that [illegible] been able to dominate, says [illegible] the cigar business and [illegible] that ambition only because the great bulk of cigars are made by hand, and therefore the small factory is practically upon an equality so far as manufacturing advantages are concerned, with the plant employing thousands of hands whose yearly output is high in the millions. The Trust is now spending large sums of money experimenting with cigar-making machines, and if they are successful in developing them to the required state of efficiency and can control the patents, they may be able to command the cigar business in the same manner that they dominate every other branch of the tobacco trade, Mr. Smith says.

Has Great Advantages.

"The combination," continues the report, "has superior advantage over competitors from the great size of its plants and from the control of more efficient machinery," but nevertheless a great many independent concerns have been able to keep their heads above water and continue active competition. However, he adds, "many weaker concerns have been virtually driven out of business or forced to sell out to the combination either by reason of the direct competition of the latter or as an indirect result of the vigorous competition between the combination and larger independent concerns."

Among the concerns alleged to be owned or controlled by the trust are the following: S. Anargyros and Monopol, cigaret firms; R. J. Reynolds, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company; D. H. Spencer & Sons company;

GET ONE TO TWO MONTHS IN JAIL

Suffragettes of High Degree Are Sentenced,

FOR DEMONSTRATIONS WEDNESDAY EVENING

Every One of Them Refuses To Give Bond.

Not Only Is the Court of No Mind To Respect the Standing of the Prisoners, but They Are Not in the Least Inclined To Receive Clemency and Glory in the Sentences They Receive.

London, Feb. 25. Suffragettes of title and the highest social position were today sentenced for from one to to two months in jail for the demonstration last night, when an army of suffragettes tried to force an interview with Premier Asquith.

Among those sentenced were Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton and daughter of the former viceroy of India; Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Daisy Solomon, daughter of the ex-premier of South Africa, and others of equal rank.

Thirty suffragettes were arraigned in court as a result of last night's arrests. They refused to give bond for their good behavior in the future, and chose instead the prison sentences.

Today's prisoners were the most fashionable that have yet fallen into the hands of the police, and there was much speculation as to whether any leniency would be shown them. Not only was the judge of no mind to show consideration for the women, but the latter were equally as determined not to have consideration shown to them. They were elated at being sentenced to prison.

The court-room was packed when the trials were called by an audience that numbered many notables. No demonstration was attempted, however, as the police were scattered through the audience.

There were three slight disturbances of the suffragettes last night, two by delegations that marched toward parliament and one by a third delegation that sought the premier at Brook's Hall, where he was dining.

BOARD NAMED BY PRESIDENT

To Plan for Reorganization of the Navy.

SPECIAL MESSAGE SENT TO CONGRESS

Giving Views of President on the Subject.

The Whole Object of the Naval Organization, the President Points Out, Is To Erect Machine Which Will, in Time of Peace, Prepare for War—Such Is Object of War Department.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Acting upon the report of the commission recently appointed by him to recommend a plan for the reorganization of the navy department, President Roosevelt today sent a special message to congress, announcing the appointment of the following joint commission of naval and army officers to deal with the question of the number and location of navy yards:

Rear Admiral A. T. Mahan, U. S. N., retired, chairman; Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, U. S. N.; Rear Admiral Richard Wainwright, U. S. N.; Captain C. McR. Winslow, U. S. N.; Major General J. Franklin Bell, U. S. A., chief of staff; Brigadier General W. W. Witherspoon, U. S. A., president army war college, and Brigadier General W. L. Marshal, U. S. A., chief of engineers.

In sending this report and the announcement of the new commission to congress today the president says among other things:

The Whole Object.

"The whole object of the organization of the navy department is to erect machinery which will, in time of peace, prepare for war; and such, no less, is the whole object of the war department. All the administration machinery of the two departments should be considered from this standpoint. The two secretaries should be supreme, but they should have the best and most responsible military advice."

The report of the naval commission favors centralization of the powers in the secretary of the navy, with the creation of an advisory board to furnish him with advice as to military operations, and another board to supervise the technical branch of the service. The chief officer of the advisory board is to be a man nominated by the secretary of the navy to the president, and who in time of war shall have command of the great fleet.

OF THIRTY-SIX OFFENSES ONLY

Can the Standard Be Convicted, Judge Anderson Intimates.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Federal Judge A. B. Anderson, presiding at the retrial of the $29,240,000 Standard Oil case at noon today indicated that he would rule that the Standard Oil company cannot be convicted of more than thirty-six offenses of rebating under the indictment on which it is to be tried. He indicated his belief that the number of offenses might be shown to be fewer than thirty-six, but not more than that number.

The court announced that this was only his opinion of the case with his present light and he added that he would not be bound by this opinion if evidence should develop during the trial to make him change his mind.

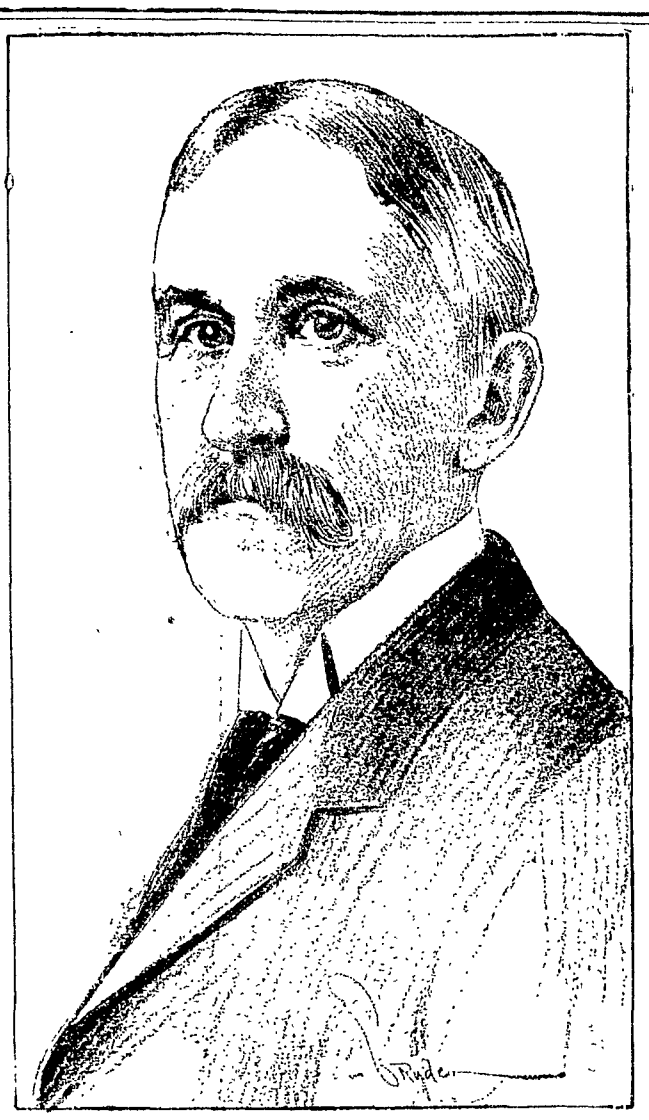
FRANK PALMER IS EXECUTED TODAY

For the Murder of Mrs. Gertrude Clinton at Reading.

Reading, Pa., Feb. 25.—Frank Palmer, murderer of Mrs. Gertrude Clinton, was hanged in the jail yard here today. The man's neck was broken by the drop and death was instantaneous.

Palmer was convicted of killing Mrs. Gertrude Clinton on September 12, 1907. He had been friendly with the woman and met her by appointment. They quarreled and he fired shot, and then stabbed the woman to death. He alleged in his defense that she was armed and attacked him and that he had to kill her to save his own life.

Palmer was convicted on December 17, 1907, and the following day he tried to kill himself by hanging. He was discovered in time and cut down, and later was declared by the prison officials to be "shamming insanity."



FRANKLIN MACVEAGH, CHICAGO MAN WHO IS BELIEVED TO BE SLATED FOR CABINET PLACE.

Franklin MacVeagh, Chicago business man and financier, is believed to be slated for secretary of the treasury in the Taft cabinet. He was formerly a Democrat, but was an ardent supporter of Mr. Taft in the last campaign, and is a brother of Wayne MacVeagh. FORTUNE UNDER A HEARTHSTONE

The Discovery of Two Men Near Danville,

DOWN IN THE OLD BLUE GRASS STATE

$25,500 in Gold, Silver and Diamonds.

The Money and Jewels Are Secreted in the Old Nathan Ross Mansion Back in Civil War Times To Keep Them from Falling into the Hands of Guerilla Sam Berry and His Gang of Cutthroats.

Danville, Ky., Feb. 25.—Twenty-two thousand, five hundred dollars in gold and silver coin, $3,000 worth of diamonds, a revolver and several thousand dollars in confederate money were found by H. S. Hensley and Albert Pawley, the latter in the employ of Hensley, under a large hearthstone at the old residence of the late Nathan Ro[illegible], near Paintlick in Garrard county.

The rich treasure had been placed there during the guerilla times of the civil war when Sam Berry, the "one-armed," and his gang of cutthroats were spreading terror in central Kentucky.

Nathan Ross was one of the richest slave owners in the South, and owned a magnificent Blue Grass estate. H. S. Hensley, who now owns the farm, came there from Harlan county.

The old Ross mansion was being wrecked when the rich find was made, the supposition being that the treasures were placed beneath the hearth by Ross. No evidence to that effect has been published, however.

Swindler Arrested.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 25.—Detectives today arrested F. E. Freeman, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, after a six months' chase. He will be taken to Cleveland to face charges of swindling eastern wholesalers out of thousands of dollars. Freeman was found running a donkey engine in a lumber camp. Pursuit of him led through many eastern states, British Columbia and Alaska.

GIVEN EARNEST CONSIDERATION

Is the Power of the Governor of State

TO HOLD UP THE APPROPRIATIONS

Through the Strong Minority in the Assembly.

Whether the Appropriation Bills Must Have a Two-Thirds or Merely a Majority Vote Is a Mooted Question—The Former Is the Contention of Democrats Concerning Certain Items.

Columbus, O., Feb. 25. The power of Governor Harmon to hold up the state appropriations through the strong Democratic minority in the legislature is under quiet but earnest consideration. It has always been a mooted question. The constitution is far from clear as to how appropriation bills shall be passed. The final source of information is in the two volumes of debates of the constitutional convention of 1862, which are preserved in the state library.

The question has been raised every session that the minority exceeds one-third of the membership in either house. Certain appropriations require a two-thirds vote for passage. Others require only a majority. That much is conceded.

The ruling has of late years been that only a majority is required for appropriations for purposes which are recognized by statute previously enacted. This would include almost all of the ordinary general appropriations bill. But the opposition contends and the point is recognized as debatable, that only those items which are specifically provided for by law can pass by a majority vote. This would bar the greater part of institutional and departmental appropriations. In that case a strong minority could as a last resort practically paralyze for a time all state business.

Agreement Reached.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Without debate the house today agreed to the conference report on the postoffice appropriation bill.

LIMITS POWER OF PRESIDENT

House Places Handicap on Chief Executive.

IT CUTS OFF ALL APPROPRIATIONS

For Any Presidential Commissions or Boards.

Such at Least Will Be the Result If a Special Rule Introduced in That Body Today by Congressman Tawney Shall Obtain—Vote Is Lopsided, but It Is Not Representative of House Membership.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Representative Tawney today introduced a special rule in the house to consider an amendment to the sundry civil bill, cutting off all appropriations for any commissions, councils or boards created by the president.

The rule provides also that no clerks shall be detailed from the government departments for duty in connection with such boards.

The rule was adopted by a vote of 140 to sixty. It now goes to the committee of the whole.

The Tawney resolution in full is as follows:

"That hereafter no part of the public moneys, or any appropriation hereafter made by congress, shall be used for the payment of compensation, or expenses, or any commission, council, board or other similar body, or any member thereof, or for expenses in connection with any work or action of any commission, council, board, or other similar body, unless the creation of the same shall be, or shall have been authorized by the law. Nor shall there be employed, by detail, hereafter, or heretofore, made, or otherwise, personal services from any executive departments of other government establishment in connection with any such commission, council, or other similar body."

To Restrict President.

"I learn," said Tawney, in discussing the resolution, "that recently a great lot of answers to interrogatories submitted by the 'uplift' commission have been dumped into the census office. Other clerks have been employed in preparing the 'homes' commission report—a report which, in my judgment, should never have been printed. All this is being done without the authority of the law."

After protests by Representatives Parsons, Republican, of New York, Parker, Republican, of New Jersey, and others to the effect that the measure would handicap the president, the house passed the special order by a vote of 140 to sixty.

Parsons then wanted to know whether this would not end the existence of the conservation commission.

Tawney told him he had not examined the law, and could not tell whether that body was authorized by law, but if it was not, it came within the provisions of the limitation.

Two more votes will be necessary on the limitation before it is finally adopted by the house. It must also be agreed upon when the house is in committee of the whole and again when the house itself adopts the report of the committee of the whole.

CARDINAL GIBBONS LAUDS TAFT HIGHLY

Expects Mr. Taft To Make a Fine President.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 25. Cardinal Gibbon today spoke of President-elect Taft in very laudatory term. Taft, the cardinal said, possesses "a cast iron hand in a silken glove, and he expects the president-elect will conduct his office admirably.

"Mr. Taft is a man of fine calibre," said the cardinal, "and his tact and diplomacy is offset by his kindness of spirit and his openheartedness.

"He idolized all who met him with love toward him, and I am sure he made few or no enemies. His good executive ability, combined with his judicial judgment, should go to make him an excellent president. I feel that he is a man of principle who will respond to his duties nobly."

It is known that the cardinal had a warm regard for President McKinley, and those who know him say that he holds Taft in still greater esteem.

STREETCAR RUN DOWN BY TRAIN

Serious Accident Occurs at Cleveland Crossing.

THREE PERSONS ARE FATALLY INJURED

Passengers Hurled Through Air by Compact.

Twenty Receive Bruises of a More or Less Serious Nature—Escaping Steam from a Nearby Factory Prevents Crew Seeing the Approaching Train—Nurse and Child Narrowly Escape.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 25.—In a collision between a Pennsylvania passenger train and a crowded streetcar, three persons were fatally injured and 20 more seriously hurt.

The streetcar was outbound and heavily loaded with passengers. At the grade crossing steam from an exhaust pipe in a nearby factory obscured a view of the approaching passenger train. For this reason the gates were not lowered and the car proceeded, although the conductor had run ahead and pulled the derailing lever. The locomotive struck the car near the rear end, splitting it in two. Many passengers were hurled several feet. That many were not killed was due to the slow speed of the train.

The fatally injured are: Henry C. Schwartz, contractor, shoulder fractured and internal injuries; Parker Lowe, contractor, arm dislocated, rib broken and internal injuries; C. H. Ball, Williamsfield, O., compound fracture of the skull.

Miss Allene Borky, a nurse girl, who had 15-months old Howard Clark in her arms, was thrown through a car window. She clung to the baby and both escaped with only slight bruises.

The temperance forces withheld their support of this measure because of a desire to have the other Dean bill which carried an amendment to the Rose county option measure killed The fact that the vote was unanimous however was a surprise It embraces a number of questions which assessors are to ask the saloon keepers and in the event that affirmative answers are given the saloon keepers are subject to punishment by fine of from $200 to $1 000 and imprisonment from six months to two years or both and their places are to be abated

HERRICK NOT A CANDIDATE

Former Governor Does Not Seek a Portfolio

BUCKEYE TOO BUSY FOR TREASURY JOB

Such Is Statement Made by the President Elect

Mr Herrick When Questioned Says That He Has Nothing To Add to the Statement Made by the Incoming Chief Executive, Which Is Made for Purpose of Making the Record Complete

New York Feb 24 That Former Governor Myron T Herrick of Ohio will not be secretary of the treasury in the Taft cabinet was set forth in the following statement written by Mr Taft after a lengthy conference with Mr Herrick

At the invitation of the president elect Mr Herrick called on Mr Taft and Mr Taft authorized the statement that the mention of Mr Herrick for the portfolio of the treasury as if he had been a candidate did him great injustice because Mr Herrick wrote Mr Taft as early as December last to say that his business engagements were such as to prevent his acceptance of a place in the cabinet

Mr Herrick when questioned said that he had nothing to add to this statement which was made for the purpose of making the record complete

The elimination of Mr Herrick at his own request would seem to put Franklin McVeagh of Chicago in the lead for the place but the only light Mr Taft would throw on the situation was that it would be several days yet before the matter would be settled

Mr Taft was the principal speaker at the mass meeting in the interest of Hampton Institute under the auspices of the Armstrong association at Carnegie hall A drenching rain failed to keep away a large crowd eager to hear Mr Taft and learn of the industrial progress of the Hampton students nor did it dampen the enthusiasm of the welcome to the president elect There were only a few vacant seats in the vast auditorium when the exercises were opened by Bishop David H Greer of the Episcopal diocese of New York

Columbus, O., Feb. 24. — While on her way to a theater, in company with several relatives, Mrs. Ethel Boeshans, 18, a bride of two months, was electrocuted when her umbrella came in contact in the dark with a telephone wire which, having torn loose during a severe wind and rain storm, had fallen over a heavily charged light wire.

A dozen persons tried to pull the young woman's body away from the wire and all were hurled to the ground by the shock, one young man being severely burned.

They Arrest People for the Misuse of the Mails.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 25.—Federal officers who caused the arrest of J. C. Mayhray and three others for misuse of the mails, say they have broken up a gang that operated in all parts of the United States and secured $500,000.

The men are said to have "promoted" fake wrestling and foot and horse races. In the effects of the men the authorities say they found a record of agents in all parts of the country as well as correspondence from men who had been victimized. The men were identified by T. C. Cavanaugh, of New Orleans, who says he lost $35,000 on a fake wrestling match.

The men lived in one of the best residence districts here and had a suite of offices in a down-town building. They pleaded not guilty.

Ellis declined to reveal his antecedents.

THE OFFICERS ARE HIGHLY PLEASED

Hear That Sperry Is To Retain Command of Fleet.

Fort Monroe, Va., Feb. 25. - Rear Admiral Sperry will leave for Washington this afternoon instead of on Friday, as he at first planned. He goes to consult with the navy department authorities as to the further plans for the fleet, and nothing in the way of inspection or detaching any of the ships will be done until he returns. The commanding and other officers were much gratified by the published reports from Washington that Admiral Sperry would continue as commander-in-chief of the battleship fleet until the date of his retirement in September.

Some others were inclined to believe the report that has spread throughout the fleet to the effect that President Roosevelt intends himself to name the next commander-in-chief before he retires from office. An official announcement is expected while Admiral Sperry is in Washington.

THE HOUSE ADOPTS CONFERENCE REPORT

On the Naval Appropriation Bill Carrying $136,000,000.

Washington, Feb 25.—The house today adopted the conference report on the naval appropriation bill, carrying about $136,000,000. There is still a disagreement between the senate and house on the senate amendments for retirement of officers, limiting purchase of powder from "trusts," naval base south of San Francisco, restoration of the marines to ship duty and division of war vessels, so that the Pacific coast shall be guarded with one-half of the navy.

Further conference on these disagreements was ordered.

The senate amendments are an increase of approximately $1,000,000 over the appropriation voted by the house.

The total number of employes in the steel industry, exclusive of the ore, coke, coal or transportation ends of the business, is officially estimated at 1,458,000. Of this number, about 729,000 are skilled workmen, and of the total 1,158,000, about 800,000 are now employed.

SENATOR GIVEN FAIR WARNING

Constituent Warns Him of Nitroglycerin Plot.

A BREMEN MAN IS DISGRUNTLED

Declares Ohio Senate Chamber Will Be Blown Up.

Tips Off Senator Gillette Because of a Friendly Feeling for Fairfield County Legislator—Says Poor Man No Longer Has a Chance in This Country—Objects to Defeat of Dean Bill.

Columbus, O., Feb. 25.—Senator Gillette of Fairfield county created a mild sensation in the senate when he read a letter from John Komisha, one of his constituents living at Bremen, in which the startling announcement is made that the senate chamber will be blown up with nitroglycerin next Tuesday. He warned Senator Gillette to keep away from the chamber that day because he said he felt friendly toward the senator.

Senator Gillette turned the letter over to Lieutenant Governor Treadway, and it was decided also to call the attention of postal authorities to it. It is likely that every precaution will be taken to prevent any one carrying explosives into the statehouse Tuesday.

Komiska said there no longer was a chance in this country for a poor man. He took particular exceptions to the action of the senate in killing the Dean bill, intended to amend the Rose county local option law.

Rathburn Loses Fight.

Columbus, O., Feb. 25.—Senator Rathburn of Meigs county failed in his efforts to secure a reconsideration of the Clevenger resolution, the result being that the senate again went on record in opposition to taking up tax reform questions at the present session of the legislature.

The Clevenger resolution provides for the appointment of a commission to study the question and report at the next session. The Democrats and two Republicans, Rathburn and Tuttle, the latter of Franklin county, voted for a reconsideration, but the Republicans had 18 votes against the proposal. Senator Rathburn made a plea for reconsideration, saying the matter had not been carefully considered before the resolution was adopted and that it was clearly a movement for delay. Senator Mather, the Republican leader, declared the resolution would not necessarily mean the prevention of legislation on taxation matters if the need were really pressing.

In the house, Representative Gilligan's bill providing for municipal lodging houses was passed, with an amendment offered by the author stipulating that no one shall use a municipal lodging house as a legal residence.

To Discuss Canals.

The question of canal appropriations has forced itself to the front, and a special hearing before the senate finance committee has been arranged for Monday evening. Senators Bader, Baker, Tod and Patterson, who are among the leaders, have taken an attitude against further appropriations. They would discontinue the comprehensive plan to rehabilitate the canal system. Opponents of the rejuvenation scheme say that the canals have been losing money for over 50 years, and that now there are only 15 miles of navigable and actively used canals in Ohio.

The senate passed the bill of Senator Tuttle, legalizing manual training, domestic and industrial courses in the public schools. There now is no provision for such teaching, and it was stated by Mr. Tuttle any citizen could enjoin the operation of such schools as now are in operation if he were so inclined.

A resolution was introduced in the senate by Senator Tuttle providing for the appointment by Governor Harmon of a commission of four to cooperate with a commission appointed by Mayor Bond to prepare plans for a celebration of the centennial of the capital city in 1912.

Kills Tidrick Bill.

Columbus, O., Feb. 25.—The house taxation committee killed the Tidrick bill, intended to force the payment of personal taxes by providing that suit can not be brought to collect on notes, stocks, bonds and other securities which have not been recorded. The house elections committee decided to report favorably the Schreiber bill, providing for the election of all judges by separate ballot.

CABINET TAKES ON FINAL FORM

President-Elect Has Great Faith in Lawyers.

HE DECIDES UPON FIVE ATTORNEYS

Only Place in Doubt Is Treasury Portfolio.

Franklin MacVeigh and Myron T. Herrick Are Two of the Men Under Consideration—Head of the War Department Comes from Tennessee and Is a Lifelong Democrat.

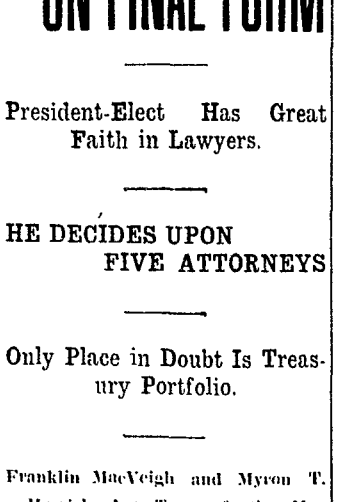
Mr. Taft this morning delivered an address at the Academy of Music, under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania, in celebration of university day. A walking stick used by Benjamin Franklin and by him presented to LaFayette will be a gift to the university by the president-elect. Tonight he will attend the Pennsylvania university alumni dinner. He leaves for New York tomorrow morning.

Mr. Taft admits he is making headway in the selection of a secretary of the treasury, but maintains the place is not yet filled. Franklin MacVeigh and Myron T. Herrick are two of the men under consideration. With this exception the Taft cabinet is complete, and when officially promulgated shortly before his inauguration will be found as follows:



GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM.

New York Lawyer Who Is to Be Taft's Attorney General.

Secretary of State—Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania.

Attorney General—George W Wickersham of New York.

Secretary of War—J. M. Dickinson of Tennessee.

Secretary of Commerce and Labor—Charles Nagel of Missouri.

Secretary of the Interior — R. A. Ballinger of Washington.

Postmaster General - - Frank S. Hitchcock of Massachusetts.

Secretary of Agriculture — James Wilson of Iowa.

It will be observed that in this list are five lawyers, of whom Mr. Taft believes there are none better in the country. It may be stated that this fact is not a mere coincidence, but is an accomplishment which has been carefully planned and striven for by the incoming president, and bears a most important relation to what he believes to be the important work of his administration.

Constitutional legal restrictions on corporate abuses are the accomplishments he will strive for. The extreme difficulties of first framing such measures and then of securing their enforcement have confronted Mr. Taft with great force. To meet them with success he believes will require the combined legal skill of the ablest minds he can bring to the task. In assembling his legal cabinet the president-elect has not lost sight of the necessity of obtaining men whose beliefs on the questions to be dealt with coincide with his own. Mr. Taft's position has been clearly embodied in his inaugural address, and this document is known to have received hearty adoption and complete approval by all of the men selected to be Mr. Taft's cabinet advisers.

With this known careful consideration with regard to the lawyers in his cabinet, it is interesting to know something of the personality and legal achievements of the latest acquisition, J. M. Dickinson of Tennessee, who accepted the war portfolio at the hands of Mr. Taft in Cincinnati.

Mr. Dickinson will give up the position of general solicitor for the Illinois Central railway system and a salary of $35,000 a year to become a cabinet minister. He is between 54 and 55 years of age, a native of Mississippi, served three months in the Confederate army as a boy, graduated from the University of Tennessee and finished his education in Germany.

Mr. Dickinson has always been a Democrat, although he is a personal friend of President Roosevelt and refused to vote for Bryan. He was for a time judge of the supreme court of Tennessee, and was appointed by President Cleveland assistant attorney general of the United States, serving under Attorney General Harmon.

MAN IN YEARS; INFANT IN SIZE

New Yorker Is Being Given Treatment in Hospital.

New York, Feb. 25.—Born twenty-seven years ago, but even now, in physical growth and mental development, an infant of six, Harry Needleman, today became the subject of a course of treatment at Harlem hospital which will be watched with interest by the entire medical world.

When six months old, Needleman fell from a high chair and struck on his head. In the consequent operation the doctors found it necessary to remove the thyroid gland, an insignificant looking anatomical object in the human trachea. It is supposed to have something to do with the formation of the mucin, the lubricant for the mucous membrane. After its removal, he grew slowly and remained adolescent.

An accident last Friday when he was struck by a wagon brought him under the surgeon of the Harlem hospital staff and today the doctors began a course of "age-ing," administering frequent doses of powder made from thyroid glands of healthy sheep. It may take years, but the doctors hope to urge along Needleman's development until his mental state is appropriate to his years.

Apparently there are simply different routes to the same end. Over in Illinois the solons spend the time in the Hopkins cave while here in Ohio they take vacation. There's no deciding what might be worse.

"Since the largest battleship is the Delaware why didn't we name the smallest battleship the Texas?" asks the Chicago News. Possibly the best answer is that we did.

It is said that Mr. Perkins will receive $100,000 from his lectures this year and he won't have to down any alligator steaks either.

Senator Penrose deserves thanks for the spanking he administered to Senator LaFollette the other day. The Wisconsin man is demanding delay in the consideration of the appropriation bill and by innuendo is setting forth that there was one thing wrong about some of the items. It was then that Penrose came back at him with the assertion that if the Badger senator had attended the meetings of the committee as he should have done he would have had all the information he needed. He followed the attack up by calling attention to the fact that LaFollette habitually neglected his committee work and gave a summary of his attendance upon the meetings of the several committees on which he holds membership and his many absence from the senate upon lecture tours and in pursuit of his private business affairs. Penrose was right. The principal and most important work of a legislative body is done in committee. But there is no gallery in the committee rooms and LaFollette finds work there accordingly distasteful and unprofitable from his point of view.

We were aware that the late Mr. Geronimo's past was not all that it should have been but we hardly think the St. Louis Globe Democrat is justified in referring to him as the aboriginal Ollendorff. It should bear in mind that he is dead and can't defend himself.

*Although he admirably has some marked peculiarities let us not condemn Senator LaFollette too hurried*ly. There's a chance for a good many reformations in the senate and one never can tell just what kind of an instrument providence will utilize to accomplish them.

Although Mr. Roosevelt will retire from the presidency in a few days it will doubtless be a long time before he has thoroughly recovered from the meeting habit.

One of these days some distinguished legislator will want to know why the cabinet officers can't get along on $8,000 if Mr. Knox is glad to take a portfolio at those figures.

An esteemed Columbus exchange suggests that the proceeds of the mileage grab should be lifted from the pockets of the Pure Food solons but doesn't recommend any particular make of derrick for the test.

Wednesday the house refused to stand for the senate's raise of $100,000 to the presidential salary cut the figures to $75,000 then raised them to $75,000 but failed to make a provision whereby the president must pay his own traveling expenses. As the president at present draws $50,000 and is permitted to use all or any part of $25,000 additional for traveling expenses it looks very much as though the house is simply offering the incoming president a financial inducement to curb his roving tendencies.

It is probable next time that the Ananias club will hold a meeting on the evening of March 4 for the purpose of making Colonel Roosevelt a member of it.

It seems to be something of a task for Mr. Knox to do his work up to the Knox standard and at the same time not show up the fine price Flows on the cabinet tariff.

One can not blame Mr. Lawler for feeling a little sore over the idea of government employes being placed on special work. It was while some of them were thus engaged that he was cavorting with the spoon at him.

Those admiral upstarts to be fussing over the question of precedence as a lot of diplomatic ladies who haven't anything else to think about.

Uncle Joe Cannon we assume from wire reports is willing to continue serving as the lower house of congress at the same old price.

FAIRBANKS HAS BEEN GREATLY MISUNDERSTOOD

Much of what President Roosevelt [illegible] office the country will also be a matter very valuable [illegible] conditions will be different [illegible] proposition the American people hold that Mr. Roosevelt's fine is so sure and that he has won a place among America's immortals. Perhaps it is merely just a purely large number of his fellow citizens withhold from Charles Warren Fairbanks the praise that is his just due. Mr. Fairbanks has been most outrageously treated by the alleged humorists of the American press. For this no good reason has ever been assigned. There has been certainly nothing in the career of Mr. Fairbanks to entitle him to the admiration and esteem of the citizens of the United States without regard to extraneous political affiliations. He was a farmer's boy who won his way through college at the cost of great sacrifices upon the part of himself and his family. He attained eminence at the bar of his adopted state when he was yet a young man. He served with distinguished ability in the United States senate. He has made a most efficient presiding officer of that body. His private life has been beyond reproach. Had he been called to the presidential chair he would have measured up to our most worthy chief executives.

But in spite of all this he has been most persistently lampooned and misrepresented by the press or a portion of it. He has been pictured as an ogre, when as a matter of fact he is one of the most approachable and courteous men in public life. He had been provided as a snob when he has in fact been the most affable and democratic of our big men and his home noted for the widest and most generous hospitality.

A man of the plainest and most abstemious habits he has been made to appear a champagne bibber and in fact the will of the newspaper paragraphers has been directed to making ridiculous and running the usefulness of one of the ablest and cleanest men in the public service. It would not be surprising if he should for this be publicans in ungrateful in truth and welcome his retirement to private life. But his nature is large indeed and how long he will respond to demands which will be made upon him when the people actually come to understand the infamy he has been done him.

THE STAMP LACKING CAUSES AN INQUIRY

Railroad Officials Are Given Great Surprise

THE HANDIWORK IN FORGERIES VERY GOOD

Tickets Supposed to Have Been Issued from LaRue Office of Big Four Are Accepted as Good but in Due Time Are Found To Be Forgeries—Secret Service Busy

As a result of receiving a letter from the general passenger agents office asking him up for failing to stamp a couple of tickets issued over the Missouri Pacific railroad John Slagle agent for the Big Four railroad at LaRue has discovered a clever railway swindle

The tickets referred to in the letter Mr Slagle could not remember anything about He looked into his case and there he found the original tickets Nos 120 and 121

The form had been counterfeited and the starting point of the forgers and their destinations were written in the same as the agents do transportation over the Missouri Pacific Although unstamped the tickets were accepted for passage on that line and in due course of time they reached the general passenger agents offices of the Big Four Even then no one suspected that they were bogus but upon looking up the serial numbers it was found that they belonged to the office at LaRue To be sure this caused considerable trouble to the general passenger agents department and so a hasty letter was despatched to Mr Slagle demanding to know why he had not stamped the tickets Then the forgery was discovered

The belief is that the counterfeiting of the Big Four company's tickets may be extensive and the matter has been turned over to the chief of the detective force to try and get a clew to the forgers at large

THE CHURCH BEAUTIFUL ERECTED TO THE MASTER

New Temple of Worship Finished by Baptists

IT IS MASTERPIECE OF BUILDERS' ART

Majestic Sanctuary Will Be Dedicated Sunday—A Program Appropriate to the Day Is Prepared and Will Be Enjoyed by Those Who Labor for the Cause.

Morning, afternoon and evening services will mark the dedication of the beautiful new Free Baptist church, on south Main street, Sunday.

Rev. W. J. Fenton, of Rio Grande college, at Rio Grande, will preach the dedicatory sermon in the morning, and Rev. D. B. Martin, of Hillsdale college church, a Hillsdale, Michigan, will deliver the evening sermon. Rev. Mr. Martin was pastor of the church in this city from 1894 to 1900, when he was succeeded by Rev. George E. Barnard.

The morning services will begin at 10:30 o'clock, Sunday morning, with the organ voluntary, followed by the doxology and invocation. The choir will sing the anthem, "We Will Give Thanks," followed by a responsive reading—Sixty-fourth Psalm. After the singing of a hymn, scripture reading and prayer, Mrs. W. N. Hardesty will sing a solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple."

The offering will then be taken, at which time the public will show its appreciation of this beautiful monument, dedicated to man's uplift, by the liberality of its gifts to aid the congregation in paying off the church debt. "Praise the Lord," the choir's anthem will be followed by the dedicatory sermon by Rev. Mr. Fulton.

A feature of the morning sermon will be the reading of the report of the building committee, composed of D. F. Edwards, Chairman; E. Durfee and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Barnard. This committee has had charge of its work of supervising the building of the edifice, and the report will be one of much interest.

The morning service will close with the dedicatory prayer by the pastor, singing of a hymn, the benediction and the postlude.

Sunday afternoon, the service, which will begin at 2:30 o'clock, will be in charge of the Marion Ministerial association, with Rev. David H. Bailey, pastor of Epworth M. E. church, presiding.

"A Dream of Paradise," the choir's anthem, will be followed by a vocal solo by Miss Iva Cole and addresses by Rev. Mr. Bailey, Rev. J. P. Currin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. Clarence Miller, pastor of the Central Christian church, and Rev. F. E. Zeller, pastor of the Reformed church.

Sunday evening, Rev. H. M. Ford, D. D., of Hillsdale college, will deliver an address to the young people. At 7 o'clock following the organ voluntary and invocation Miss B. L. Walker will sing "The Day Is Ended," accompanied on the violin by Charles A. Curtis.

Rev. Mr. Walker will "Praise the Lord" by Young Men's and Miss Sadie Mae Wolfe will sing "Bowed by Sin and Sorrow" by Rev. D. B. Martin.

The Free Baptist society, the fifty-second church in Marion and the new church is singularly appropriate in its location in the city, being the successor to the church of the denomination on Center street. Christianity first came to Europe and worked out a miracle in the edifice from one of the magnificent cathedrals of the old world.

To appreciate the sacred splendor of the church it must be seen on the inside. Like the great houses of God built centuries ago, the massive exterior gives but a faint idea of the beauty within. The big auditorium, done in oak and cream and yellow pine, with its heavy arches and galleries and plastered walls, resembling cement in appearance, is built with a fine blending of color and design. It is so constructed that a pin can be heard to fall on the bare floor, which was polished with a heavy machine dipped here for that purpose. The experiment of dropping a pin was tried from the east end of the church and although it fell a distance of only two feet, those stationed on the rostrum, in front of the great organ, heard it strike the floor distinctly.

Beautiful stained-glass memorial windows, reaching upward to a height of many feet, are on the south and north sides of the auditorium and the golden sun rays, transformed into mellow light, falls softly upon the interior in pleasing harmony. The Sunday-school class rooms are arranged in two semi-circular tiers to the east of the auditorium. In the west, at the front entrance of the church, is located the great organ and the pulpit. The organ towers aloft behind the pulpit like a mighty golden sentinel of God. The pews are constructed of solid oak, and the same design in their carved ends harmonizes with the architecture of the church.

In the basement are located the lecture-room, dressing rooms, the dining hall and kitchen. The culinary department is equipped with every convenience.

THE FREE BAPTIST CHURCH.

The exterior of the church building is built of light-colored pressed brick, with stone trimmings around its high arched windows. Great stone steps lead up to the front entrance to the auditorium, and to reach the Sunday-school room or basement direct, one passes beneath an arch on each side of the church down a walk almost to the rear of the building.

Following is a list of the church officers:

Rev. George E. Barnard, pastor; D. Walker, clerk; Miss Florence Durfee, treasurer; Miss Grace Durfee, organist; A. J. Peters, Silas Uncapher, C. R. Beerbower, H. Sylvester, I. S. Rayl, J. S. Whaley and M. A. Pickering, deacons; J. D. Walker, E. O. Uncapher, Lee Parker, Guy Coleman, Everett Uncapher and Howard Peet, ushers; D. F. Edwards, W. G. Harding, William Hughey, M. O. Stoll, A. P. McMurray, C. R. Beerbower and A. S. Keeler, trustees; J. S. Rayl, Sunday-school superintendent; A. S. Keeler, assistant superintendent; C. R. Beerbower, secretary and treasurer; G. B. Layman, assistant secretary and treasurer; Miss Helen Krauss, Sunday-school organist; Miss Elsie Barnard, assistant Sunday-school organist, E. O. Uncapher, chairman of the Sunday-school board; Miss Jennette Pite, Mrs. A. Wolford, Miss Florence Durfee, Miss Anna McWilliams, J. S. Rayl, A. S. Keeler, G. E. Barnard and C. R. Beerbower, members of the Sunday-school board; Miss Jennette Pite, president of Woman's Missionary society; Mrs. I. S. Rayl, vice president; Mrs. J. B. Guthery, secretary, and Mrs. S. Crofford, treasurer; Mrs. J. D. Walker, president of the Ladies' Aid society, Mrs. James Coberly, vice president; Mrs. H. J. Nash, secretary; Mrs. L. B. Taylor, treasurer; Mrs. S. E. Lindsley, Mrs. C. R. Clapsaddle and Mrs. G. E. Barnard, executive committee; G. B. Layman, president of the Christian Endeavor society; Miss Faye Woodmansee, vice president; C. R. Beerbower, recording secretary; Miss Kate Spurgeon, corresponding secretary; Everett Uncapher, treasurer; Miss Essie Barnard, organist; Miss Helen Krauss, assistant organist.

The memorial window donors were, Rev. M. and Mrs. George M. Baker, Mrs. Catherine Pettit, Mrs. J. Hutchinson Hood, the Edward Uncapher Sunday-school class, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Melly, Everett Lewis Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gardner, the Christian Endeavor society and the Mrs. Mary A. Wolford Sunday-school class.

Unlike most congregations upon undertaking the building of a new church, the Free Baptist congregation has not solicited the general public aid. However, in view of the fact that the congregation is heavily in debt as a result of the construction of such a magnificent temple of worship, Rev. George E. Barnard, the pastor, will be glad to receive donations. It is expected that at the dedicatory services, Sunday, many munificent public gifts will be made.

Two men answering the description of the fellows wanted at Carey were taken from the train by the officer and locked in the city prison.

It later developed that the men were wanted at Carey, but not for breaking into a car. They gave their names as Thomas Dugan, of Dayton, and Peter Hunn, of Toledo, and said they were apple peddlers. They had a car of apples at Carey and not having $10 to pay the freight and secure their goods, a liveryman of that place loaned them the money and a rig in which to peddle the fruit. After disposing of the apples the men left the horse and skipped out. The liveryman came down from Carey, Wednesday night, and after the men made a settlement with him they were released.

MATHER MAKES A SUGGESTION

Tells Members Who Are Desirous of Saving Themselves From Oblivion to Carve Names on Their Desks. Will Save State $10,000 Annually. Was Favored by Senate and House Clerks, Although They Lost Fat Rakeoff by Operation.

Columbus, O., Feb. 26.—Senator Mather's bill putting an end to an expenditure of $20,000 every other year for biographical sketches of legislators was passed in the senate.

These biographical sketches are issued in the form of books and distributed among friends of the members. The bill was supported by the clerks of the house and senate, although they will lose several hundred dollars through the abandonment of the custom, which has prevailed for some years. Senator Mather said that if the members were desirous of saving themselves from oblivion, he could only suggest that they carve their names on their desks.

The Alsdorf bill, amended to carry an appropriation of $20,000 for the extension of agricultural teaching by Ohio State university to all the counties of the state, was passed by the senate. All the money appropriated is to be spent for instruction, no part of it for hall rent, janitor service or anything of that nature.

HOUSE PASSES RITTER BILL

Provides For Remodeling Old Penitentiary Buildings.

Columbus, O., Feb. 26.—Representative Ritter's bill, providing for the reconstruction of an important part of the Ohio penitentiary, passed the house.

If it goes through the senate, it postpones for many years the realization of hopes entertained by many prison reformers who have urged the building of a new penitentiary for men and a separate institution for women.

Ritter's bill stipulates that where possible the work of reconstruction is to be done by prisoners, and thus temporary employment will be found for the men thrown out of work through the expiration of contracts for prison labor. Two cell blocks, a new light, heat and power plant, dining room, kitchen and bakery are contemplated.

Machinery For Factory Buildings.

The prison factory buildings are to be equipped for the manufacture of articles intended for state use, so as to conflict as little as possible with free labor. Provision is made for rebuilding the women's department and also for the care of insane persons with criminal tendencies. It is expected the latter will in large measure supplant the Lima state hospital, which originally was projected as a hospital for criminals.

The rebuilding of the penitentiary is to be in the hands of a commission of four, each of the members of which will serve three years and draw a salary of $1,200 annually. Representative Price Russell of Wayne county made an unsuccessful effort to have the commission reduced from four to one member.

The house also passed the Vaughan bill providing for 2-cent mileage to members for weekly trips home. This repeals the present law, which through a mistake allows the members mileage on the basis of 12 cents a mile.

The senate passed the Lawyer bill making a levy of 10 cents per capita for residents of the state for the support of the Ohio National Guard and the erection of armories. It is expected the measure, if passed by the house, will raise over $400,000 annually. To build armories one-fifth of this money will be used.

Buffalo, N. Every American indoor record from the first to the fifteenth mile was smashed. Dorando made several game efforts to regain the lost ground in the twelfth and thirteenth miles, but Shrubb never allowed him to get more than 15 yards away from him. The time for the 15 miles was 1:24:06 4-5.

Shrubb's lead at the finish was 2 3-5 laps. Dorando completed the 15 miles, finishing in a sprint that brought a storm of applause from the crowd.

Columbus, O., Feb. 26.—William Jennings Bryan has accepted an invitation to speak in Columbus Sunday, May 16, in connection with the convention of the International Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

OHIO CONTINUES TO RISE AT CINCINNATI

Fifty-five Foot Stage Is Expected Today.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 26.—That the Ohio river here will reach a stage of 60 feet on the present rise was the prediction made by Local Weather Forecaster Bassler. If this stage is reached it will inundate considerable property on the river front and cause considerable damage. Already Water and Front streets are flooded, and about 300 residents in low-lying lands in Covington, Newport and Bellevue, Ky., are submerged.

The railroads will be compelled to abandon the Union Central and Pennsylvania stations when the river reaches 55 feet. Arrangements have been made to utilize the Eighth street or the Storrs station.

The Ohio above Cincinnati is rising all the way from Pittsburg to this city. However, a disastrous flood is not expected at any point.

Flood Warnings Issued.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Flood warnings were issued by the weather bureau for the Ohio river from Parkersburg to Cairo, for the Mississippi river from Cairo to Helena, Ark., and for the lower Tennessee and lower Cumberland rivers. Fifty-five feet of water is expected at Cincinnati tonight, with possibly five feet more to come, and 42 feet at Evansville by Tuesday of next week.

Falling at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Feb. 26.—No serious damage was done in the upper Ohio valley by the expected flood, which was held back by a sudden fall in temperature. The river went only three-tenths of a foot above the danger line here and is falling now almost as far down as Wheeling.

Wright Takes Balloon Ride.

Pau, France, Feb. 26. — Orville Wright made his first ascension since the accident at Fort Myer, in which he was severely injured. Accompanied by his sister, he was a passenger in the balloon Icarus, which was piloted by Marquis De Kerkariou.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Washington is rapidly assuming an inaugural appearance practically all of the preparations having been completed. No "freak" features, such as cowboys throwing lassos, wild animals and various mechanical devices, will mark the inaugural parade. All organizations of whatsoever kind will have to conform to the dignity of the occasion.

NOT THROUGH WITH COOPER

Defense Takes Another Turn at Own Witness.

RESUMES EXAMINATION TODAY

State May Decide to Make Further Attempt to Secure Damaging Admissions From Aged Defendant In Carmack Murder Trial— Governor Patterson Will Next Be Called to Stand to Tell What He Knows of Alleged Conspiracy.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 26.—Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, one of the defendants in the Carmack murder trial, was recalled to the stand today by his own lawyers for the purpose of questioning him further as to the troubles leading up to the killing of E. W. Carmack. In all probability the state will ask a few more questions in cross-examination.

Immediately after Colonel Cooper is finally dismissed from the stand, Governor Patterson and his adjutant general, Colonel Tulley Brown, will be called to tell what part they played in this political tragedy. Colonel Brown was in James Bradford's office at the conference which began at 3 p. m. the day of the tragedy and closed only 20 minutes before the killing. Just as the conference closed Governor Patterson telephoned for Colonel Cooper. It is the defense's theory that while going to the governor's mansion the Coopers met Senator Carmack and that the killing resulted.

The cross-examination of Colonel Cooper is easily the most striking feature of the trial thus far. The colonel is 65 years old, but well preserved. He has the reputation of being high-spirited and easily moved to anger. It was common rumor that he took the stand against the advice of his counsel. However, in Tennessee, the defendant who does not take the stand is looked upon with suspicion. Nevertheless all efforts of the state to confuse the witness on the subject matter of his direct examination failed. He stuck to his story, never faltered, never hesitated.

DEPENDS ON HORSE SHOE

Rasor Trial May Turn on Question of Equine Footgear.

Medina, O., Feb. 26.—The question whether the horse which drew the buggy in which Miss Orie Lee rode to her death had three "bare" hoofs and one shod or three shod hoofs and one "bare," is an important point with which the jury will have to wrestle in passing upon the fate of Guy Rasor, accused of the murder of Miss Lee.

The prosecution offered considerable testimony that the tracks of the animal at the point along the road where the girl's body was found indicated three bare hoofs and one that was shod. When the defense began taking testimony several witnesses declared that the tracks indicated three shod hoofs and only one bare hoof.

The importance of this contradictory testimony lies in the fact that the state also set up a statement that the horse driven by Rasor the night of the murder had but one shoe.

DRAFT NAVAL CODE

International Delegates Sign Declaration Today at London.

London, Feb. 26.—The international naval conference concluded its labors at a final session here, and the delegates today attached their signatures to a code of naval warfare, to frame which they came to London. The later meetings of the conference have been devoted to the consideration of a request from Washington for a declaration to the effect that the prize court shall be considered a court of arbitration and not a court of appeal. While not willing to concede all that the United States desired in this connection, the delegates decided to express themselves favorably to this proposal. This it is understood is satisfactory to the United States.

The American delegates expressed themselves as well satisfied with the code as it has been drawn up.

CHURCH CELEBRATES

Edifice In Which "America" Was First Sung Is Hundred Years Old Today.

Boston, Feb. 26.—Completing a century of existence today, the famous Park Street church of this city will begin to celebrate its centennial tonight. The festivities in connection with the centennial will continue for a week.

The Park Street church is one of the most noted of American churches. It is marked as the building in which "America" was first sung in public, and it was in this church that William Lloyd Garrison, the famous abolitionist, made his first public address against slavery. The church is Congregationalist in denomination and has had several famous preachers.

Opium Commission Quits.

Shanghai, Feb. 26. — The international opium commission has practically concluded its work here, except for the submission of reports from certain subcommittees.

TAFT TAKES A WALK

Is Accompanied by Hitchcock on Five-mile Jaunt Through Park.

New York, Feb. 26.—All qualifications of uncertainty in the prediction that Franklin MacVeagh of Chicago has been selected by Mr Taft as his secretary of the treasury are hereby removed. Mr. MacVeagh accepts the place, and thereby the Taft cabinet was made complete as heretofore announced.

No official or unofficial declaration of Mr. MacVeagh's appointment is to be made by Mr. Taft until he promulgates his entire cabinet. But in this case, as in other notices of appointments, the facts are known to be correct.

With his postmaster general, Frank H. Hitchcock, Mr. Taft took a five-mile walk through Central park in the biting wind. He saw a number of New York city financiers during the day, but said the calls were those to express friendship and had no other significance.

PEACE SOCIETY TO DINE ROOT TONIGHT

The chairman in charge of the dinner is Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent, and the presiding officer will be the Hon. Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain. Mr. Root will deliver one of the addresses.

Threatens Life of Mayor.

Philadelphia Feb. 26. — Declaring that she would kill Mayor Reyburn unless he gave her $9 to pay her fare to Buffalo, an insane woman created a disturbance at the city hall. With screams and cries for aid she fought the men who led her from the mayor's office to the eelroom on the sixth floor, and drew a crowd of several hundred people to the scene.

HITS SIMS ON SOLAR PLEXUS

Judge Anderson's Ruling Staggers District Attorney.

SETTLEMENTS TAKEN AS BASIS

Under Court's Ruling Maximum Fine That Can Be Imposed on Standard Oil Company Is $720,000, Which, In the Opinion of Attorney Wilkerson, Is License to Great Corporation. What Bonaparte Said About Decision at Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Judge Anderson's ruling in the retrial of the government's suit against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana to the effect that each of the 36 settlements, and not each of the 500 different shipments, should constitute an offense, was a severe blow to District Attorney Sims and his associates in the prosecution. He and his assistant, James H. Wilkerson, had argued that each shipment, of which there were 500, making possible a maximum fine of $10,000,000, constituted an offense.

Judge Anderson declared he could not understand this view of the case. He said that it had not been made plain what comprised a shipment—a trainload, a car lot or a gallon. He saw no reason why, if a trainload or a car lot were regarded as a separate offense, the matter might not be further divided making a hundredweight the unit or a gallon, greatly increasing the number of offenses and magnifying the punishment. The division of alleged offenses, he said, seemed to fall naturally into 36 parts or counts, each marked off by a money settlement. It was in these settlements that rebates, if any were made and received.

Wilkerson's Argument.

Mr. Wilkerson argued that the fine which would be possible under the court's ruling would serve merely as a license to a great corporation. On this point Judge Anderson said, in effect: "That is a consideration which has no weight with me whatever. I am not concerned with the effectiveness of the statutes, but with their interpretation and application. If the view that I have taken has the effect that has been stated, that is a matter for the lawmakers to consider. If their laws are inadequate, let them supply a remedy."

There was little on the surface to indicate the great portent of Judge Anderson's low-voiced words, unless it was the intense quiet of Mr. Sims, or the expostulatory expression on the face of Mr. Wilkerson.

Neither would discuss the ruling, but the government's attitude all along has been plain. This attitude, expressed in veiled form in the unsuccessful attempt to have the Landis decision reviewed by the supreme court, has been that failure to inflict a huge fine proportionate to the earnings of the defendant would practically nullify years of investigation and prosecution, and make the large sums expended so much wasted money. A fine of $10,000,000, it was believed, would suffice to indicate that the government has the power to deal efficiently with alleged corporate evils. Judge Anderson's ruling, it is said, removes that hope.

Bonaparte's Comment.

Washington, Feb. 26.—"Well, that's one way of construing the law," was the only comment Attorney General Bonaparte would make when informed of District Judge Anderson's expressed intention to rule that the unit of offense in the Standard Oil rebating cases now up for trial in Chicago would be the actual settlement of the freight charges between the parties concerned.

NEGROES FIGHT DRINK EVIL

Their First Anti-Saloon Convention Begun In Atlanta Today.

Atlanta, Feb. 26 — Following the lead of the whites, the southern negroes began today a prohibition movement of their own at the first meeting of the anti-saloon convention of the negroes of the south.

During the sessions of the convention there will be addresses by leaders of the south of both races. In announcing the purpose of the convention the committee in charge said:

"We are determined to prove to our worthy white friends that we are as profoundly concerned in the great moral movement as any others. It is an opportunity for our people to give the world notice that we are on the right side of every question for the promotion of the public good."

WIND DOES DAMAGE

Unexpected Gale Sweeps Down Upon New York Harbor.

New York, Feb. 26.—A northwest gale which swept down with unexpected violence upon New York claimed a heavy toll from land and water traffic, while the havoc which it wrought throughout the city resulted in the death of one person and the injury of perhaps a dozen others. The mercury fell as the wind rose. Frost and continued low temperature was expected to continue for at least 24 hours.

ROASTS SECRET SERVICE

Congressman Refers to Assassination of McKinley as Sample of Work.

Washington, Feb. 26.—By an overwhelming vote and without party distinction, the house of representatives sustained the committee on appropriations in again reporting a provision in the sundry civil appropriation bill restricting the operations of the secret service detectives of the treasury department. The president was scathingly denounced by Mr. Cook (Rep., Colo.), while Mr. Smith (Rep., Ia.), a member of the appropriations committee and one of those named by the president in his message of Jan. 1 last as being responsible for the secret service limitation, seemingly employed all the invective at his command in an attack on that service.

He compared the secret service detectives with "common liars," declared them to be worthless, and pointed to the assassination of President McKinley as a sample of the watchfulness and capacity of those men, one of whom, he said, stood at the president's side when he was shot down and failed to observe the approach of the assassin with his supposedly bandaged hand in full view.

CHURCH WORKERS MEET IN CONFERENCE

Convention of Protestant Laymen In Pittsburg Today.

Pittsburg, Feb. 26. — What is declared to be the most important conference of the Protestant laity ever held in the United States was begun in this city today by representatives of a large number of men's organizations in the various churches.

The following church organizations are represented in the conference: Episcopal Brotherhood of St. Andrew, Interdenominational Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, Baptist Brotherhood, United Presbyterian Men's league, Congregational Brotherhood, Methodist Brotherhood, Men's Movement of the United Brotherhood Church, Southern Presbyterian Brotherhood, League of Universalist Laymen, Canadian Presbyterian Brotherhood, Men's Movement in Christian Church and the Presbyterian Brotherhood of America.

One of the most important features of the conference will be the discussion of a proposition to arrange for co-operation of the various organizations in the larger cities as well as nationally with a view to unity and co-operation both in church work and municipal improvement. Another end suggested for the proposed federation is the raising of the male portion of the church into as important a factor in church and charitable work as have been the women of the churches.

EDUCATORS ADJOURN

Delegates by Shrewd Move Secure Promised Rates Home.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—A special car, a call for volunteer passengers and the triumphant saving of $10,000 brought the annual meeting of the department of superintendence of the National Education association to a dramatic close.

Under the rules of the Western Passenger association the organization was compelled to agree to an attendance of 1,000 visitors to their meeting in order to secure a reduced rate on the railroads. Dr. Winship of Boston, chairman of the department's transportation committee, discovered that there were but 930 visitors present.

Thirty volunteers were hurriedly enlisted and sent to Michigan City, where they bought tickets to the convention and returned to Chicago with their certificates, thus insuring reduced rates home for all the delegates.

Uniform Postal Rates.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The parcel post service to foreign countries practically will be uniform after March 1, with a postage rate of 12 cents a pound and a weight limit of 11 pounds, Japan and Sweden, however, will not be able to adopt the 11-pound weight limit until next month, and France, Hongkong and Denmark are expected to conform in a short time.

Declare Beveridge Leader.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 26. Senator Albert J. Beveridge was enthusiastically acclaimed the leader of the Republican party in Indiana at a banquet in the Claypool hotel, given by the state Republican Editorial association. The Republican members of the legislature were guests and Senator Beveridge was the guest of honor.

SCHOOL ESTABLISHED FOR CONSUMPTIVES

Cincinnati Board of Education Will Establish a School in a Forest.

The Cincinnati board of education recently adapted a resolution, introduced by President J. M. Withrow, providing for the establishment of a "forest school," where children suffering from tuberculosis or exposed to the danger of the dread disease will be taken care of. The resolution directs the building committee, together with the superintendent of schools and the health officer, "to investigate and report upon the feasibility of establishing a 'forest school' where such children may be kept in school with surroundings best adapted for their instruction and for the return and preservation of their health."

Dr. Withrow's plans are farreaching. He proposes that the forest school shall be located somewhere out on the hilltops or even in the country. He is now considering a site in College Hill. Once the school is established arrangements will be made for taking care of the children. They are to be taken to the school at 7:30 in the morning, and kept there until 6 o'clock in the evening. The transportation will be paid for by the board of education. A kitchen will be established in connection with the school, and the children will be fed also at the expense of the board. Every endeavor is to be made to keep the children outdoors, the lessons being conducted in the open whenever the weather permits. After the school has been given a trial it is probable that tents will be put up, so that the children can even sleep in the open air.

This will be the first institution of the kind in the United States. There are a few such institutions in Germany, and the results they accomplish are said to be wonderful. Every member of the board was enthusiastic over the matter. "I think it is the most humane thing we have it in our power to do," said Member Emil Pollak.

It often happens that the man who talks much about going to glory has neighbors who wish he'd make a start.

Some people are living examples of the conventionality of the unconventional.

It will not calmly declared the eminent surgeon Mr Cancer is hopeless I know it and I am going to settle my affairs so that when I am finally disabled there will be nothing left to do but wait for the end

SYLVIA GREEN WEDDED TODAY

Daughter of the Richest Woman in the World,

BECOMES THE WIFE OF MATTHEW WILKS

Bride Is Twenty Six and Groom Sixty Five

The Bride and Her Mother Are Forced To Run the Gantlet from Their Home in Hoboken to a Cab Around the Corner To Take Train to Morristown New Jersey, Where Wedding Is Celebrated

Morristown N J Feb 22—Miss Sylvia Green daughter of Mrs Hetty Green and Matthew Astor Wilks were married at St Peters church here today by Rev Thomas J Stinger Mrs Green was present and her daughter was given away by her cousin Howland J Tell

Mrs Hetty Green her daughter Miss Sylvia arrived here at 10 1 this morning They were met at the train by the Rev Mr Stinger who accompanied them to the Morristown Inn where they rested for an hour or more They then proceeded to the church where the ceremony was performed

Arrangements for the wedding were made yesterday by the brother and sister of the groom

Mrs Green said that the reason she brought her daughter to Morristown to be married was because of the pleasant associations which surrounded the town She and her daughter lived here for a time when the girl was very young

Mrs Green was in high spirits laughing and joking with the other members of the party

There were no bridesmaids and the simple wedding ceremony of the Episcopal church was used in its entirety Mrs Wilks was dressed in a neat fitting gown of dark brown broadcloth with brown ornaments of lace and wore a white feather trimmed hat and a white boa Luncheon was served at the inn followed by a reception to the immediate wedding party It is said Mrs Green paid for the wedding luncheon

The bride and groom will leave at 6 o'clock for New York to start on a wedding trip which is expected to include an automobile trip through part of Canada

Running the Gantlet

Hoboken N J Feb 22—Mrs Hetty Green the richest woman in the world following precedent declined today to take the public into her confidence even about a trifling matter is the marriage of her daughter Sylvia Green to a scion of the old Astor family The aged millionairess intimated last night that the wedding would be performed at noon today at the Hoboken flat at which she and her daughter reside

But it was not and thereby is supplied a running reason Mrs Green knew full well that the mere announcement that there would be a wedding there would attract a crowd and she was right Long before 4 o'clock the crowd became so dense that it blocked the street in front of the house Not a dozen people there had ever heard of Mrs Green until they read the announcement in the newspaper but the crowd while possibly not as demonstrative as the spectators that have occupied points of vantage about the houses on Fifth avenue New York for recent international marriages was fully as big and as curious

Some had brought rice others aged and decrepit articles of footwear and all anticipated a good view of the bridal party as it left the house

But they were doomed to disappointment After numerous false alarms the door of the apartment house was opened quickly and two women on elderly and the other plainly much younger but with their faces concealed with heavy veils rushed out

As they moved forward two policemen who had been vainly trying to keep the crowd moving wang their head and behind the pair and hurled them to the corner where a cab was standing The vehicle started for the Lackawanna station at full speed As they alighted there it was seen that the pair were Mrs Green and her daughter

Mrs Green wore a new black silk dress trimmed with real Irish point lace while her bonnet was a real foreign creation The young woman who is to become a bride later in the day may have worn her bridal outfit but a long dark cloak covering her from her neck to her heels prevented any of the curious determining that fact

The couple were greeted by an elderly man whose face was kept small well down in the collar of his fur lined coat He was believed to be the happy bridegroom Matthew Astor Wilks

The party was hustled into a private car which was attached to the regular westbound train It was stated later that they were bound for Morristown New Jersey and that the marriage would be performed at the inn there

OTHERS CAN BUT FOLLOW COURSE

American Battle Fleet Has Led the Way

THE PRESIDENT WELCOMES FLEET

Voices the Pride of Nation in Its Voyage

Refers to Officers and Men of the Battle Fleet as the Best of All Possible Ambassadors and Heralds of Peace—Tells Them They Have Borne Themselves So as To Make Proud Their Countrymen

Old Point Comfort Va Feb 22—President Roosevelt made the following address of welcome to the fleet this afternoon on board the Mayflower when Admiral Sperry and his fleet commanders and captains made a call to pay their respects and later when the president visited the flagships of the fleet he repeated substantially the same words to the officers and men assembled on the vessels

Address to Fleet

Admiral Sperry officers and men of the battle fleet

Over two years has passed since you steamed out of this harbor and over the world's rim and this morning the hearts of all who saw you thrilled with pride as the hulls of the mighty warships lifted over the horizon You have been in the northern and southern hemispheres four times you have crossed the line you have steamed through all the great oceans you have touched the coast of every continent Ever your general course has been westward and now you come back to the port from which you set sail This is the first battle fleet that has ever circumnavigated the globe Those who perform the feat again can but follow in your footsteps

Fine Prophets Rebuked

The little torpedo flotilla went with you around South America through the straits of Magellan to our Pacific coast The armored cruiser squadron met you and left you again when you were half way around the world You have fulfilled every prediction of the prophets of failure In all your long cruise not an accident worthy of mention has happened to a single battleship not yet to the cruisers or torpedo boats You left this coast in a high state of battle efficiency and you return with your efficiency increased better prepared than when you left not only in personnel but even in material During your world cruise you have taken your regular gunnery practice and killed though you were before with the guns you have grown more skilful still and through practice you have improved in battle tactics Though here there is more room for improvement than in your gunnery

Tribute to Personnel

Coincidentally I suppose I need hardly say that one measure of your fitness must be your clear recognition of the need always readily to strive to render yourselves more fit if you ever grow to think that you are fit enough you can make up your mind that from that moment you will begin to go backward

As you watching the fleet comes back in battle shape than it went out In addition you the officers and men of this formidable fighting force have shown yourselves the best of all possible ambassadors and heralds of peace Wherever you have landed you have borne yourselves so as to make us at home proud of being your countrymen You have shown that the best type of fighting man of the sea knows how to appear to the utmost possible advantage when his business is to behave himself on land and to make a good impression on a foreign land We are proud of the ship and of all the men in this whole fleet and we welcome you home to the country whose good repute among nations has been raised by what you have done

ASQUITH REFUSES THE HUMAN LETTERS

And Clever Scheme of Suffragettes Falls Through

London Feb 23—The suffragettes today applied to the British postal service to get their case before Premier Asquith but they were again defeated and the head of the Liberal government will unmolested today's plan was the most clever so far devised by the advocate of votes for women They sent Mrs Mary McClellan and Miss Inez Solomon via the express postal delivery which it has been the boast of old Cheldom will deliver anywhere in the United Kingdom anything from a peanut to an elephant

The two women were properly carded and turned over to the express messenger who went to the office of the premier and informed his secretary that he had a parcel for that must be delivered and which being marked personal must be receipted for by the premier in person

The ruse however did not succeed The police had informed Premier Asquith and he refused to receive the human letters directing that they be returned to the senders

REDUCTION OF STEEL TARIFF

Would Doubtless Lead to a Cut in Wages,

SAYS MR GARY IN A STATEMENT

Given Out for Publication This Morning.

The "Open Market" Move of the Steel Trust at Last Begins To Take on the Phase Anticipated in Some Quarters—There Is To Be No Reduction in the Price of Steel Rails

New York Feb 22—It developed today that a cut in the prices of steel rails will not be made An official of the United States Steel corporation said that at the time of the declaration for an open market in the steel trade there was no discrimination in the matter of steel rails However there was a tacit agreement among five of the largest steel manufacturers that rails should be exempted from the fight for business and the influence of the concerns it is said today is sufficient to make any cut by any other concern either trust or independent wholly improbable

The five concerns which are exempted from the cut mark are the United States Steel corporation the Pennsylvania Steel company the Bethlehem Steel company the Cambria Steel company and the Lackawanna Steel company

Elbert H Gary chairman of the board of the trust today added to his statement of yesterday in which he said that it is foolish on the part of anyone to attempt to predict the future influence on the trade of the open market or to predict a general cut in wages by saying that in the steel business like any other there would doubtless be a cut in wages should there be a reduction of the tariff

BURTON CALLS RAINEY A LIAR

Incident Following Speech of Rainey in the House

RAINEY DISCUSSES AN ALLEGED GRAFT

Burton Says Illinois Man Repeats Many Falsehoods.

Pandemonium Reigns in the House When Burton Makes His Charges and Rainey Demands They Be Placed in the Record—Burton Withdraws His Remarks and Then Proceeds Along Moderate Lines

Washington Feb 22—Senator-elect Burton of Ohio gave the lie to Representative Rainey in the house Monday afternoon following the latter's speech denouncing William Nelson Cromwell and others for alleged participation in Panama graft

I have never in my long service in the house heard such monchalant disregard for accuracy or have heard the reputations of men at home and abroad so assailed Burton began

The Ohio representative characterized Rainey's statements as full of child like and crude abandon and amidst a storm of applause from the Republican side said that the Illinoisan had blundered when there were real wrongs right near home When he declared that Rainey had made falsehood after falsehood the latter jumped to his feet

I demand that the gentleman's remarks be taken down Rainey shouted red with rage while pandemonium reigned in the house Republican members applauded Burton continued his speech the Democratic members shouting for order

Order Is Restored

Rainey's request finally reached Representative Watson Republican of Indiana who was in the chair By dint of repeated poundings Watson finally restored order and directed the stenographer to prepare the remarks objected to so that they could be read

Before they were read Burton withdrew them

I refuse to accept this shouted Rainey and insist that they shall be reported

Finally Rainey withdrew that request after Burton had acknowledged that they were made under some considerable provocation

Burton then resumed on more moderate lines

The selection at Panama declared Burton was free and untainted, whenever the Panama canal is mentioned the name of Charles P Taft is also dragged in said the Ohioan

Although I have just finished a political controversy with that gentleman in which he was my adversary never have I had anything but the highest respect for his honesty of purpose

Never a Reflection

In the fierce light which beat upon him during his candidacy for the office I never heard a word that reflected upon his honesty his integrity or his patriotism

Will the gentleman dare to make the statements outside this house? Burton shouted to Rainey The same statements that he has made here of under the constitution and under the rule of the house

The Annuity club Burton said humorously is after a particularly bad bit of lobbying of this Illinois member of which the gentleman from Illinois tells he is pleased to be a member He never taken out incorporation papers A resignation of the member ship would be exceedingly difficult But if there is such a club then I submit that the gentleman from Illinois is a paragon for its first presidency

AVENGE MURDER OF AN OFFICER

Greek Quarter of Omaha Is Wrecked.

TWO BOYS SHOT AND EIGHT PERSONS HURT

Thirty Buildings More or Less Wrecked.

Ottumwa Is the Scene of a Near Lynching—Black Brute Assaults Woman Recovering from an Operation—Beats Her with a Curtain Pole While She Lies in Bed Beside Infant Child.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 22. — After attending a mass meeting at the city hall in South Omaha, and listening to inflammatory speeches in which prominent citizens took part, between 800 and 1,000 men and boys started for the Greek quarter to avenge the death of Patrolman Edward Lowery, who was shot and killed Friday night by a Greek whom he had placed under arrest. Attacks were made at three different points.

Before their thirst for blood had been satisfied two boys were shot and at least eight persons injured by heavy missiles which the crowd used as weapons, and not less than 30 buildings were partly demolished. The injured boys are Frank Sweeney and Joseph Gamble, each about 15 years of age, who received part of the contents of a shotgun fired into the crowd by the maddened Greeks. The other persons injured were all foreigners.

The three attacks were made almost simultaneously, and the destruction was completed before Chief Briggs could get his scattered force, which is not great at any time, together and stop the depredations. Meantime Sheriff Bralley was notified and collected all the deputies possible and rushed them to South Omaha to aid the police. It took some time to get the force organized, and during the interval Greeks were attacked on every hand.

A Near Lynching.

Ottumwa, Ia., Feb. 22.—The citizens of Ottumwa were on the verge of adding another bloody chapter to the history of race riots in the United States. A mob of men and boys, which increased from 100 to more than 1,000, gathered around the city jail, thirsty for vengeance upon an unknown negro who committed an assault upon a white woman. Three negroes were taken to the city jail as suspects and one to the county jail. A demonstration was made by the mob as the fourth man was brought in, but there was no man daring enough to lead.

John Junkin, a negro suspected of the murder of Clara Rosen two weeks ago, was taken out of town secretly by the police following the early manifestation of mob spirit. The recently organized vigilance committee aided the police, who declared they had the situation in control. Company G of the National Guard, under command of Captain Schamp, was held in the barracks.

Mrs. Charles M. Johnston, the invalid wife of an Ottumwa traveling man, was in bed with her four-year-old child when she awoke to find a negro bending over her. Before she could scream for help the black seized her by the throat and began to choke her. Despite her weakness as the result of a recent operation, Mrs. Johnston fought desperately. She tore herself loose from the big hands and the child screamed. There was a curtain pole an inch in diameter which was used as a window prop within reach. The negro grabbed this and beat the woman until she became unconscious.

The cries of the child finally aroused the neighbors, who found Mrs. Johnson lying on the floor unconscious. By her side was the curtain pole stained with her blood. The news spread rapidly. The police called out the vigilantes and within a half hour armed posses were on the trail of the fleeing negro. Members of the citizens' guard were posted in places where riots were feared and the homes of the negroes were placed under watch.

INDIAN FATALLY STABS A WOMAN

Navajo Brave Runs Amuck in Cincinnati Union Station.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 22. — With an earsplitting warwhoop an unidentified Navajo Indian war chief ran amuck in the Union station here, and before he could be overpowered he had fatally stabbed and cut Mrs. Anna Devord of Huntington, W. Va., and Max Meyers of Cincinnati, and seriously wounded Joseph W. Gordon of Cambridge, Ill.

As the Indian's blade penetrated the clothing of Gordon and entered the flesh, passengers and station attaches, who had stood rooted in their tracks with horror, made a concerted rush on the madman. Male passengers and station employes then hurled themselves upon the prostrate Indian, who struggled desperately to free himself from their grasp. The dagger was knocked from his hand and he was taken in charge by the police.

On the train the Indian, who had been to Washington to see the secretary of the interior, was noticed by passengers to be brooding and sullen.

THE AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL

The Bill Is Reported from Committee to Senate.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Carrying a total appropriation of $13,773,276, which is $889,450 more than as passed by the house, the agricultural appropriation bill was reported to the senate from the committee Monday.

For the forest $500,000 is added, which is to be used for fire protection. The bureau of plant industry receives an increase of $156,090, of which $30,000 is for promulgating the standards of the different grades of cotton and $102,530 is added to the appropriation for the best methods of meeting the ravages of the cotton boll weevil.

To enable the commission on country life, appointed by the president, to complete its work and prepare the results for publication, $25,000, is appropriated.

Another provision is inserted creating a congressional commission on alcoholic liquor traffic, for which an appropriation of $80,000 is made.

For the purpose of demonstrating the best methods of making denatured alcohol, on a scale suitable for the use of the farmer, an appropriation of $15,000 is made.

DEWEY AND EVANS WOULDN'T BUTT IN

That's Why They Are Not of Fleet Welcoming Party.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The one particular thing that most pleased the president, in the return of the fleet from its around-the-world cruise was the fact that the voyage had discredited the criticisms made by various magazine writers.

The president told his various callers today that the ships were in fine condition. He is convinced that the lessons of the cruise will never be forgotten by the navy officials, and is sure that public sentiment has been changed to support his policy of naval expansion.

The absence of Admiral Dewey and Rear Admiral Evans from the reception ceremonies has caused considerable comment. Both were invited, but declined, Dewey pleading rheumatism and Evans a conflicting engagement. It is believed, however, that the principal reason why they refrained from participation in the home-coming welcome is that they did not want to "butt in," as one naval officer of high rank said today. Both felt, it is said, that the show was not theirs, and that the president, who sent the fleet on its voyage, and Sperry, who brought the ships home, should have all the limelight.

SUITOR IS SHOT THROUGH BREAST

When He Opens Fire on Home of Joseph Swartz.

Columbus, O., Feb 22. Joseph Kaennailey, of Cleveland, was shot in the right breast here this afternoon by his prospective father-in-law, Joseph Swartz. Kaennailey was engaged to Swartz's daughter, Theresa, who lived in Cleveland. Three weeks ago the couple came to Columbus. Kaennailey is said to have been jealous of the girl, and today went to her home where he was refused admission. Going to the back porch he pulled a revolver and commenced shooting through the rear door. Swartz returned the shot, which entered Kaennailey's right breast. The wounded man was sent to Mount Carmel hospital, and Swartz and his daughter were taken to the police headquarters awaiting investigation.

HONOR IS PAID TO WASHINGTON

Not Forgotten in Enthusiasm Over Lincoln.

THE PRESENT DAY IS A GENERAL HOLIDAY

Observed in Every State Excepting Mississippi.

Even There the School Children Remember the First President with Appropriate Exercises—President-Elect Taft, Governors Fort and Hughes and Other Eminent Citizens Make Addresses.

The usual honors are being paid today to the Father of His Country, despite the fact that the celebration of the centennial of the birth of Lincoln has this year overshadowed the birthday of George Washington.

As a legal holiday today is more widely observed than Lincoln day, since the adoption of the latter day as a holiday has not become general in the greater part of the states. Washington's birthday is a legal holiday in every state except Mississippi. There, as elsewhere, the day is observed with exercises in the public schools.

President-elect Taft delivered an address today at the University of Pennsylvania, Governor Fort of New Jersey spoke at the annual celebration of the Union League club of Chicago, and Governor Hughes of New York was the principal speaker at the winter convocation of George Washington university in the national capital.

Fort Speaks in Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 22. The main features of this city's celebration of Washington's birthday are the two great public mass meetings and the annual banquet of the Union League club.

Governor Fort of New Jersey was the principal speaker today at the first of the mass meetings. The other speakers are William Dudley Foulke, the well known Indiana reformer; President Stryker of Hamilton college and the Hon. Joseph Willett of Georgia, one of the leading orators of the south.

Chicago has not permitted its enthusiasm over Lincoln to cause it to forget Father George, and the arrangements for today's celebrations are probably the most elaborate ever made.

Day in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Feb. 22 -The principal feature of Washington's birthday in this city is the presence of President-elect Taft as guest of the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Taft delivered the university day oration in the Academy of Music today and will be the guest of the University of Pennsylvania Alumni society at its annual dinner in the university gymnasium tonight.

For many years Washington's birthday has been a great day in the university's calendar. The orators are chosen among the leading speakers of the nation. Among Mr. Taft's predecessors have been President Roosevelt, President McKinley and the Hon. Joseph H. Choate.

In National Capital.

Washington, Feb. 22.- Washington's birthday being a legal holiday in the District of Columbia, it is being generally observed in this city. Various celebrations of the day are being held, among the most interesting being that at George Washington university.

The principal speaker at the university was Governor Hughes of New York. He has many admirers here, and there was a large gathering at the university to hear his address. The occasion was the winter convocation of the university. A reception was planned for the governor after the convocation.

SHOE IS NOW ON THE OTHER FOOT

Senators and Congressmen Are Greatly Worried.

Washington Feb 23 - The president's determination not to make any more political appointments during his term of office, is causing considerable anxiety among senators and representatives, who have promised places to their constituents.

Representative Hepburn, Republican, Iowa, called at the White House today to urge the appointment of Herman Reeves for the new federal judgeship recently created in Alaska. He was told that the president's determination was unchangeable. Senator Curtis of Kansas, met with a similar disappointment. Senator Flint, who has been expecting to procure the appointment of a friend for the new immigration district in southern California, was also disappointed.

JUDGE HART, WHO PRESIDES AT TRIAL OF THE COOPERS, CHARGED WITH KILLING CARMACK.

Four weeks were occupied in obtaining a jury to try the Coopers and former Sheriff Sharp at Nashville, Tenn., for the killing of Edward W. Carmack. Judge William M. Hart, who presides at the trial, used extra precaution in order to obtain an absolutely unprejudiced jury. Division of sentiment regarding the tragedy and the widespread publicity given to it rendered this a most difficult task, and more than 1,200 talesmen were examined before the final twelve were selected.

Delmar, Del., Feb. 22.—With the coaches filled with passengers on their way to Norfolk to witness the homecoming of the battleship fleet, the first section of Pennsylvania passengers train, No. 19, southbound, early today collided with two locomotives in the yards here. Immediately following the collision, a combination baggage and mail car and a baggage car of the passenger train caught fire.

Seven persons all railroad employes or mail clerks, were killed. Caught like rats in the burning mail and express cars, their bodies were so horribly charred and mutilated as to make identification almost impossible.

FALLS TO DEATH FROM WINDOW

Relative of President Roosevelt Is Killed.

FOUND DEAD ON SIDEWALK BELOW

Stewart Douglas Robinson Takes Awful Plunge.

In Trying To Raise a Window at Harvard, Falls and Bumps His Head—Is Cared for and Left by Companions—Supposed That His Death Results from Second Attempt To Raise Window.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 22.—By a fall from a six story window of Hamden hall, a dormitory on Massachusetts avenue, Stewart Douglas Robinson, 19, son of Douglas Robinson of New York city and a nephew of President Roosevelt, was killed.

Robinson, was out with a party of fellow students, and late in the evening he complained of not feeling well and went to the apartments of his brother, Monroe Douglas Robinson, in Hamden hall, instead of going to his own rooms.

It is understood that shortly after his arrival young Robinson stumbled and fell and struck heavily on his forehead, receiving a painful injury. His friends say they put him in his brother's bed and after raising the window a few inches in response to his request for more air, went away, leaving him apparently asleep. That was the last they heard of young Robinson until they were told that his body had been found on the sidewalk.

It is believed that after his friends left him Stewart got out of bed and walked towards the window to open it wider. It is thought that as he leaned out over the sill he became dizzy and, losing his balance, fell out of the window, which is about four feet from the floor, to the pavement six stories below.

The building was erected at a cost of $100,000, and contains a theater seating nearly 1,500, a lodge room, gymnasium, bath, library and kitchen.

BOTH SULLIVAN AND MORRIS OUT

According to the Decision of the Circuit Court.

Columbus, O., Feb 23.—The circuit court handed down a decision, this afternoon, declaring that neither the appointment of John Sullivan, by Governor Harmon, nor that of J. C. Morris, by Governor Harris, as members of the state railroad commission, was legal.

Morris, the court held, could not be legally reappointed because his term did not expire until after that of the appointing governor.

Mr. Sullivan's appointment was declared illegal because it was made by the governor while the legislature was still in session.

The decision further stated that Sullivan could now be legally appointed.

GARFIELD SLATED FOR FEDERAL BENCH

Will Succeed Judge R. W. Tayler in Northern Ohio District.

Cleveland, Feb. 23.—James R. Garfield, secretary of the interior, is slated to succeed Judge R. W. Tayler as judge of the United States court, Northern district of Ohio.

An attempt was made several weeks ago to induce Tayler to run for congress, to fill the vacancy caused by Representative Burton's election as senator. More recently he has been mentioned for the court of appeals, and it is understood that Taft has promised to give that appointment to him, and to name Garfield as his successor.

Garfield was a United States civil service commissioner and was made commissioner of corporations in 1903 and secretary of the interior March 4, 1907.

Cargo of Five Thousand Cats.

Japan, it seems, is infested with rats, and the reason is explained by a Paris contemporary—viz. that the Japanese cats, which are not prolific, are pampered to an extraordinary degree. During the last few days, the chronicler proceeds, a ship has left one of the principal German ports with 5,000 cats on board. These on arrival are to be settled in the various maritime towns of the mikado's dominions, and we further learn, says the London Globe, that the present consignment of cats is to be followed by four others, each of 5,000. The name of the principal German port is not given.

SEND MARINES TO SAVE NEGRO

Navy Department Responds to Appeal of Pensacola.

A WHITE BOY IS KILLED BY PRISONER

Negro Captured by Police and Lodged in Jail.

The Structure Is Quickly Surrounded by a Mob—Sheriff Asks Aid of Federal Judge, Who Issues Orders to Officers at Navy Yard—Crowd Follows Rescuers and Is Repulsed by Bayonets.

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 23.—Eastman Spears, colored, was rescued from an angry mob that threatened to storm the county jail by a detachment of United States marines, who, with fixed bayonets, removed him to the navy yard.

The crime for which Spears was arrested was the killing of Earnest Mertins, a 15-year old white boy, who was struck on the temple with a rock and instantly killed. Some white and negro boys were fighting near Palafox wharf, and the negro Spears, who was not engaged in the fight, picked up a rock and hurled it at the white boys, missing them and striking young Mertins, who was standing on Palafox wharf awaiting the return of a parade.

Officers captured Spears and took him to the jail. The police dispersed a small mob at the jail and it was thought there would be no further trouble. Later, however, crowds began gathering again, and it was feared an attempt to get Spears might be made at any moment.

Sheriff Van Pelt appealed for assistance to the United States government, and upon the request of Federal Judge Sheppard, a detachment of marines from the navy yard were rushed to the city on one of the government vessels and went at once to the jail. Later it was decided to take the prisoner to the navy yard. On the march to the wharf the crowd of nearly a thousand sullenly followed. Once the mob made a rush toward the prisoner, but a dozen of the marines faced about and held the crowd in check while the remainder hurried the negro to the boat.

WHITE CROSS WORK FOR SICK CHILDREN

Plan of Distinguished Russian Countess To Aid the Unfortunate Little Ones.

Inspired with the hope of founding a great international organization which will accomplish for the children of the world what the Red Cross has done for the sick and wounded, Countess Lydie Rostoptchine, a distinguished Russian, now traveling in the United States, is endeavoring to interest the women of the United States in the project.

"The idea in which the Red Cross had its inception is one which appeals to the heart of all mankind," said Countess Rostoptchine recently at a Washington hotel. "That as well as the excellence of its organization accounts for its power and prestige the world over. It has done for humanity what scattered philanthropists never could have accomplished, and the suffering of sick and wounded has everywhere been alleviated. The human heart cannot be less touched by the miseries of childhood.

"Charitable workers and sociologists are agreed that no outlay of effort repays so largely as the work in behalf of unfortunate little ones. Every great city now has its institutions and its societies devoted to the relief of sick and destitute children. Why not concentrate these efforts in one great organization, to be known as the White Cross, which shall ultimately equal in numbers and prestige the great Red Cross?

"This has come to be my fixed idea, and I hope before leaving this country to be able to interest many persons in the formation of such an organization."

WHY THE UNIVERSE WILL NEVER DIE IS ILLUSTRATED

Facts Demonstrated by the Scientific Searchers as to the Everlasting Features of World and Universe.

In a forest we find co-existing evidences of life in all its stages from its earliest development to the last signs of death and decay. There are the nuts and seeds, the germs of future plants, then the young and tender saplings, next the full grown adults. Here and there we come across the "giants of the forest," vast trees with rings donating hundreds of years' growth. Later in the stages of life we find the old moss grown oaks, etc., that the next storm will bring to the ground, and, last of all, the decayed and fallen remains of former life.

The same thing is true of the starry heavens. Here we find worlds in every stage of growth, development and decay.

There are the nebulae worlds just coming into being, the white suns, of which Vegas is a good example, in intensely hot youth; next, worlds like our own sun, in a somewhat later stage of growth, but still hot and luminous; next we have worlds growing older and darker, such as many of the red stars appear to be doing; and, lastly, dead worlds like our own moon.

Some points in this classification may be open to question, for it is not by any means certain that red stars, for instance, are cooling down always; they may sometimes be growing hotter, at least for a time, and nebulae do not always develop into stars, but the above is the generally received order.

On philosophic grounds Herbert Spencer was convinced there must be cycles of growth and decay in the evolution of the universe. Moreover, it may be asked, how is it that the universe is not dead already? If it has existed from eternity there has been an infinite time for this dissipation to take place. On the other hand, we may say that nothing whatever can be postulated as to an infinite universe at all, except that it be infinite, the dissipation of its energy must take an infinite time, and so the death of the universe will never come at all.

Though it is true that the suns of the universe are growing colder by radiation, this radiant energy is absorbed and preserved by the dark stars and the nebulae at low temperature. Of recent years it has been shown that the quantity of dark and faintly luminous matter in the part of the universe which alone we can reach without telescopes is far greater than was formerly supposed to be the case. Photographs of regions of the sky taken after long exposures have revealed the existence of nebulous matter utterly unknown before. The well known group of the Pleiades "is wrapped and entangled in an immense cosmical cloud."

The sun and other luminous stars radiate heat and light into space, this radiant energy is not lost, but is constantly absorbed by the colder portions of the nebulae and dark bodies of the universe. Every ray emitted by a sun is absorbed and its energy transferred through the gaseous particules of the nebulae to suns that are being formed in the neighborhood of or within the nebulae. Now and again collisions of dark bodies must occur, resulting in the evolution of immense heat and light and the phenomena of a "new star" is seen.

Two colliding suns give birth to an enormous mass of gaseous matter under the influence of gravity and radiation pressure of light and the process of evolution once more goes on "in an eternal cycle in which there is neither beginning nor end." Such, at least, is the opinion of Arrhenius, upon whom the University of Cambridge has just conferred its honorary degree, and there is much to be said for this view of the matter.

Under the influence of gravitation matter tends to concentration in vast centers, but this is counteracted by the scattering action of the light pressure. This idea of the balancing of contrary tendencies is ancient, and we well remember being told of the two "forces, attraction and repulsion, by which the world is kept going." The philosophic notion is at least as old as Aristotle. "Solar systems are evolved from nebulae; nebulae in their turn are produced by the collision of suns."—By F. O. Henkel.

EXERCISES ARE HELD IN SCHOOLS MONDAY

The Anniversary of Washington's Birth Is Observed.

SOME APPROPRIATE PROGRAMS GIVEN

Marion Joins in the Annual Celebration—The Postoffice Is Closed at Noon and Most of the Offices in the Court-House Suspend Business. Few Stores Observe the Day.

One hundred and twenty-six years ago, Monday, George Washington was born. Just how many years later history does not record accurately, but it was when George was very young, he cut down a cherry tree with his pretty little hatchet. That fabled incident is as fresh in the public's mind now as is the memory of the "Father of His Country," himself. That same little hatchet, in a figurative sense, figured in the exercises of the schools, Monday, as it did when grandpa and grandma went to school. And the story of how George—brave boy that he was—told his father that he could not tell a lib and "fessed" up to chopping down that tree, why, it's just like it always was. Some times teacher springs it, clothed in the language of mutable literature, but the thought is just the same as it was years and years ago—George never told a lie.

How many have emulated him with regard to the cherry tree and suffered the poignant penalty of parental wrath, is immaterial. The fact remains that there was only one George Washington, as there is only one sun and only one Niagara. Because of this Uncle Sam has set apart February 22 as a legal holiday, and it was observed in Marion as it was everywhere in the United States.

Monday morning, appropriate exercises were held in the schools, and that afternoon the pupils had a vacation. The postoffice closed at noon, and the banks were closed all day. Most of the offices in the court-house were also closed. Few stores, however, observed the day by closing.

MIRTH IS CATCHING AND THEY SNEEZE AND LAUGH

Snuff and Pepper Scattered in Little Theater.

Some person or persons caused the patrons and management of the Marion Family theater a great deal of annoyance, Monday evening, during the first performance, by scattering Scotch snuff mixed with pepper about the theater. For a season the patrons were robbed of all enjoyment by the stuff filling their nostrils and eyes. Some people of weak lungs and throats were obliged to leave the play-house. The people on the stage suffered little from it until the last act was almost completed. The management is making an effort to locate the parties guilty of the contemptible trick and has offered a reward for their apprehension.

THE COUNTY OFFICIALS WILL GO FOR THIS ONE

One to Five Years in Penitentiary for Lobbying.

THAT IS THE BILL PREPARED BY BEATTY

If Any County Officer Solicits the Assistance of a Legislator To Increase Either His Salary or Tenure of Office He May Be Sent Up. Columbus News.

Columbus, Feb. 23.—Senators Huffman, of Butler, and Beatty, of Wood, each brought back a bill of a very radical nature, Monday afternoon, to be introduced at the first opportunity. Beatty's bill will give sorrow and distress to the average county official, for it provides that if any such official solicits the assistance of a legislator to increase either his salary or tenure of office, he may be sent to the penitentiary from one to five years. The county auditors' association, the county clerks' association, the county recorders' association, the sheriffs' association, the infirmary directors' association and the county surveyor's association will get busy and kill that bill. They will feel that it is their bounden duty to prevent the passage of any such measure.

Senator Huffman's bill will draw the fire of the auditor of state and his force of 100 or more attaches. It provides for the abolishing of the present bureau of accountings, which is in the auditor's department, and instead creates a commission of three, to be appointed by the governor, to perform all the duties now done by the bureau. One of the commissioners is to be the head of the office and draw an annual salary of $3,000 and the other two get salaries of $2,000. The number of examiners necessary may be appointed. This takes the bureau of accounting out of the hands of the Republicans and turns it over to the Democrats. It is not likely the Republican members will vote for the bill.

House Chairman Ritter of the finance committee thinks that his bill for the reconstruction of the penitentiary will solve the problem of how to find work for the convicts thrown out of employment by the Wertz law abolishing contract labor. There are 150 prisoners idle now and there will be another batch idle in July when the next contract expires. The next to expire will be in 1910. Ritter's bill is on the house calender and will be reached this week. It provides for the appointment of a bi-partisan commission of four, appointed by the governor, the latter to be an ex-officio member, to have charge of the work, which is to be done by the prisoners. If the bill passes it will be necessary to appropriate about $250,000 to do the work. The erection of buildings in which supplies can be made for the state's use is contemplated in the plan. Ritter has talked the proposition over with the governor and believes he has convinced him that his bill will solve the problem that has been giving the governor so much serious concern.

The published report that Governor Harmon is taking lessons in horseback riding so that he will be able to sit astride of a mount in the Taft inaugural parade in a natural and dignified way is something of a libel on the governor, who really has been a fine horseman since youth. A portion of his early days was spent on the farm where he learned how to ride a horse and ride one well. Governor Harmon will ride a horse purchased by President-elect Taft and will be as much at home in the saddle as the troopers who will act as his escort in the parade. Governor Harmon and the President-elect have been intimate friends since boyhood.

Several days ago W. H. Lemmon, a Cleveland chauffeur, applied to the state automobile department for a license and No. 2613 was sent to him. Monday the number tag was returned by Lemmon, who stated that the combination of his name and the number in which there was thirteen was one he would be afraid of and so he asked for another which would not be a hoodoo. His wishes were complied with.

Wants Third Divorce.

Bennett Bright has begun suit for a divorce from his wife, Anna, in the Findlay courts. He claims they were married in this city, June 29, 1903. He charges his wife with cruelty and neglect of duty and avers that she began to mistreat him on the day of their marriage. Bright has twice been divorced and his wife was a widow at the time of their marriage.

Petition Is Granted.

The Carroll ditch, to be deepened, widened and straightened by Marion and Wyandot counties, was viewed by the county commissioners of the two counties interested, Friday. The petition was granted and the final hearing will be held at the office of the Marion county commissioners, Wednesday, April 28, at 10 a. m. The ditch is about six miles long.

MRS. MATTESON DIES AT UPPER SANDUSKY

Death Is the Result of a Very Long Illness.

Mrs. Sarah E. Matteson, widow of the late Joab Matteson, of Upper Sandusky, died at the home of her son, Ira T. Matteson, at that place, Monday morning, at 4:30 o'clock. Her death was very sudden and was caused by heart trouble of which she had suffered a number of years. She was eighty-three years of age and is survived by a number of children and step-children. Nelson Wolfe, of this city, is a son-in-law of the deceased. Mrs. Matteson was very well-known in this county having been a frequent visitor here. She was a woman of noble character and her death will be sadly mourned.

The funeral was held, Wednesday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, from the home of her son at Upper Sandusky, and interment was made at that place.

THE SPEEDY FINISH OF PROJECTED LINE

The Bonds Are Written and Promoters Happy.

FINDLAY-MARION CONNECTION SURE

The Promoters Will Go East at Once and Will Apprise the Men of Money That the Bonds Are Ready and Only Cash Is Needed Now. Work To Begin Soon.

Saturday, the requisite number of bonds were guaranteed for the Findlay-Marion interurban line, and the promoters now announce that the road will be built as speedily as possible.

Up to Wednesday of last week, as much as $7,000 of the bonds in Hancock county had not been underwritten, but by Saturday this small amount was disposed of, and the road is an assured fact.

Messrs. Hankey and Meeker, the promoters, will leave at once for New York, where they will meet with certain big financial men, who are real backers in the enterprise. That they were much interested in the interurban project was manifested in their action of a few days ago when they wired to learn what progress was being made in disposing of the bonds.

The statement is made that work will be started on the new line not later than April 15, perhaps sooner, when many teams and men will break the first ground at a point yet to be selected.

The construction of the proposed road means much to the communities through which it will pass, and the news that it will positively be built will be received with pleasure.

MONEY AND RELIGION.

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for February 28 is, "The Gospel in Samaria." Acts 8:1-25.

Outside the quaint old walled city of Taiku, Korea, are the French Catholic church and the Presbyterian mission compound. When the Protestant missionaries arrived, the Catholic priest, whose diversion was his garden, generously shared his strawberry plants with his neighbors. These had been imported and reared at great labor, and the gift was an appreciated one. The very next season the priest's own crow of strawberries entirely failed. Then his neighbors were able to restore to him what otherwise he would have utterly lost. Thus it is with all things. The principle of preservation by propagation runs throughout life. What we give we have. The ideas that are shared are most truly possessed. Religion that is carried abroad is saved at home.

The present Sunday-school lesson, concerning the bearing of the gospel to Samaria—the first step over the borders of Judaism by the infant church—was the salvation of the church itself. For today Judea is a mission land. Christian missionaries from America and Europe are now at work in Jerusalem, bearing back the gospel which they possess because of the missionary activity of the early church.

It was a great dream which that little band of humble folk in old Jerusalem cherished; the dream of a world-conquering faith. Other religions have held it, too, but now the vision is fading from every other faith, and meanwhile is gripping Christianity with new power. Nations whose very existence was unguessed by the early church are today turning toward the light of the cross, while others, like North America, then undiscovered, confess supreme allegiance to the Crucified, and give richly of their treasures of life and wealth for the wider dissemination of the message which Philip carried to Samaria.

The Scattered Embers.

The rod of persecution sent the first embers of Christianity flying in many directions. After the martyrdom of Stephen, the fury of Jewish biggotry broke, and before it Christians were scattered everywhere. But every fleeing Christian meant a progressing evangel. Truth thrives under persecution. By last evening's mail I had a letter from a friend in Japan, pointing out that in the early days, when passport restrictions made it impossible for missionaries to go far into that country, the latter were aflame with impatience to carry the gospel to the remotest interior. Now, however, that all obstacles have been removed, a strange lassitude seems to have beset the church, and there are yet millions of Japanese who have never heard a single presentation of the gospel in their own villages and towns. It does seem as if external difficulties promote the gospel, while ease without creates difficulties within.

In Korea the native Christians have a practice that is commendable. Whenever one is obliged to remove his home from one town to another, he counts it as a providential sending upon a mission, that he may be an evangelist to the new neighborhood. Even further than that many Christians go since it is not uncommon for a Korean convert to remove his home voluntarily to a village where there are no Christians, simply for the purpose of according a center for the extension of the gospel. More of that spirit in church work at home would wondrously sweeten the church, as well as the world. If there were more swarming among churches there would be fewer Cain's quarrels.

An Earthquake Incident.

At this distance it is hard to catch the significance of the advance of the Jewish Christians into Samaria. It is to be remembered that "the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans." Yet such is the liberalizing power of the gospel of Jesus that it made these Jewish Christians willing and eager to share their best with the Samaritans, and to take the latter into their great family. Any vital experience has this tendency to broaden.

Up until the time of the Italian earthquake there was open an agonism between the Vatican and the Italian Jew who is mayor of Rome. The latter is not only a non-Catholic, but he is a prominent Mason as well. Yet when the victims of the earthquake were carried to Rome and placed in the Vatican hospital, the mayor of the city, on his round of ministry and sympathy, was welcomed to the very Vatican precincts by the papal secretary of state. The great common sorrow had banished the old antagonism and made the public simply men and brethren.

When Dowie Invaded New York.

A careful reading of this narrative shows that the missionary movement of the Christians made a general impression upon both Jerusalem and Samaria. Possibly it may be likened to John Alexander Dowie's invasion of New York a few years ago by his "Restoration Host." Then Dowieism was the most talked of topic of the day. It created a sensation. So did the Christian movement into Samaria. There is justification in this New Testament history for the modern method of city religious campaigns. The present tendency to do things in the large, and to create a general commotion in a community, is good Christian strategy.

Up in Samaria people straightway believed. An immediate impression was made, with direct results. It is an unaccountable fact concerning Christianity, that wherever the gospel story is told, there things happen. Even one telling to a pagan has known to win him to allegiance to Christ. Usually, of course, successful evangelism is also educational and cumulative. Always, though, it must be fundamentally what went to Samaria—the repetition of the story of the Life.

A "Star Eclipsed.

Deacon Philip found up in Samaria one Simon, a sorcerer, who was quite the vogue; or, as our present colloquialism has it, he was "all the rage." There was abroad at the time a general expectation of a coming Messiah. These people satisfied themselves with a lesser one, in the person of Simon. They were not discerning enough to perceive that Simon invalidated his high claims by the very fact that he landed himself. He was a forerunner of the modern evangelist who employs press agents to fill the newspapers with tales of his own greatness. Discreet men and women wisely enough look askance at the preacher with a personal press agent. A worthy bearer of the Message abases himself, but exalts his News and his Saviour. He cries with Paul, "Not I, but Christ."

When Philip came working wonders, Simon gave up. He knew he was eclipsed. So he joined the popular movement. No one understood better than he the genuineness of Philip's work. The unthinking crowd might compare his achievements with Philip's, but he himself realized which was true and which was false. President G. Stanley Hall recently said in a magazine article that the genuineness of the claims of all psychic mediums must be tested by men who are familiar with all the arts of sleight of hand, and with the tricks of the professions of clairvoyance. President Hall himself possesses this knowledge, and he declares that this is the reason why he has not been impressed or convinced by much that moves other men. From this standpoint, the value of Simon's testimony to the miracles wrought by Philip is doubly significant. Simon was so deeply convinced as to give intellectual assent to Philip's propaganda.

Religion Not for Sale.

The Jerusalem leaders had gone down to Samaria to aid Philip in his new propaganda. The strong were interested in the weak. The apostles were not so engrossed in the Jerusalem parish that they lost their vision or sense of responsibility for the whole cause. We look in vain for any narrow parochialism in that early church Peter and John went to Samaria and laid their hands upon the new believers, who then received the Holy Spirit.

Simon saw this performance. He had the business man's intuitive discernment of a discount dollar. Perceiving the profit that could be made of this gift of laying on of hands for the impartation of the wonderful Spirit, he coveted the same power. He was an example of the all too familiar type of the man who ever has his eye open for the main chance. So, awaiting a convenient opportunity, he sought an interview with Peter and John, and offered them money if they would teach him this gift.

Peter's answer, as rendered in the twentieth century New Testament, indicates that there is sometimes justification, for very strong speech: "Take your money to perdition with you," Peter exclaimed. The occasion justified the language. It was a great wickedness that Simon the sorcerer attempted. And equally great, as it rears its head in our modern church life. Whoever attempts to inject mercenary methods into spiritual religion is guilty of that sin which has come to be labeled with Simon's name: the sin of simony.

The modern tendency to exalt the rich layman, simply because he is rich, is nothing less than sheer simony. When shall we learn the obvious lesson that it is not by her wealth, but by her spirit, that the church triumphs in her mission? Simon was terror-stricken by Peter's adjuration when the latter declared that he had no part or lot in the message because his heart was not right with God. The only place that money has in the kingdom of heaven is as a form and token of service and allegiance. A man may honor God with his substance, but it is always possible to honor him more with the heart. The former is not possible without the latter. The rich man in religious work enjoys no handicap over his poorer brother who has only the devotion of his heart and the labor of his life to give to his Master. To every one who thinks that place or power is the Kingdom of Heaven can be bought with riches, come Simon Peter's words, "Take your money to perdition with you."

LAD VERY THRIFTY IN HIS PETTY PILFERINGS

He Makes Confession as to His Enterprises.

HE STEALS SLIPPERS AND TARGET RIFLE

Wilmet Bracy Is Before the Mayor. Charles Monnette Refreshes His Memory and Finds He Is Guilty of Stealing an Overcoat from an Erie Train—Police Items.

E. P. King filed an affidavit in the mayor's court, Monday afternoon, charging Wilmet Bracy with stealing a target rifle valued at $2.50. A warrant was issued and Bracy was arrested, Monday afternoon, by Officer McDonough. The boy also stole a pair of slippers from the King store, Monday morning, the theft of the rifle being made at noon. When taken before the mayor, the lad denied having stolen the articles, but his stories differed so much that he finally confessed and told where he had disposed of the slippers for twenty-five cents and hidden the rifle.

The boy also confessed to having stolen an overcoat at the Wesley M. E. church several weeks ago, but was unable to tell the exact date. The coat was a long black cravenette, and had a pair of gloves in one of the pockets. The coat and rifle were brought to the mayor's office, Tuesday morning, by the boy's stepfather.

The boy, being under seventeen years of age, was turned over to Probate Judge W. S. Spencer, for hearing, by the mayor. On pleading guilty, he was sentenced to the Lancaster reform school, the sentence being suspended pending his good behavior, and his promise to return the stolen property to the rightful owners.

Charles Monnette, who was arrested, Monday, by Erie Detective Hostetter, on a charge of stealing an overcoat from an Erie employe named Groves, was given a hearing in the mayor's court, Tuesday. Monnette stole the coat from an Erie train while coming from Galion to this city, November 27. When arraigned before the mayor, Tuesday, he pleaded not guilty to the charge against him, but later changed his plea to guilty. He was unable to tell the officers where the coat could be found as he said he had left it at home and his mother had stored her goods and moved from the city. He said he would have to communicate with her. Sentence was reserved by the mayor to give the prisoner an opportunity to return the stolen garment.

A CLASS GATHERING AT BOYD RESIDENCE

An Evening Given to Various Social Diversions.

The Boyd home on Delaware avenue was the scene of a pleasant gathering, Monday evening, when Miss Eleanor Boyd entertained E. C. Smith's Sunday-school class, of Epworth M. E. church.

The house was decorated throughout with flags, bunting, and other decorations appropriate to the celebration of Washington's birthday. A pleasing feature of the evening was that each guest was expected to contribute some kind of amusement for entertainment. There were several contests and a spelling-match. In a guessing contest Mrs. Clara Click was awarded the prize, a pretty piece of burnt wood. In an endurance contest Miss Mayme Wasser was awarded the first prize. Music and other social diversions were enjoyed and the past history of the class was reviewed by Mr. Smith. During the evening, a buffet lunch was served by the ladies.

Mrs. E. C. Smith and Mr. R. A. Boyd were guests of the class.

Studying French in Her Auto.

When a busy woman desires to study languages it is natural for her to seek a teacher who is not averse to imparting knowledge on the fly. Thus Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth is keenly bent on mastering French, but she does not want to give time exclusively to her lessons. So she found a teacher who could give three hours to her every afternoon. These three hours are put in when she is in her auto, shopping or making calls. The teacher has her book, and the two persons study almost as calmly as if they were sitting in a library. Mrs. Longworth guides her machine and repeats words until the proper intonation is attained. By compact not a word of English is spoken on the ride.

The papers report that it has been decided to organize in the United States a Russian industrial and agricultural agency, which will have to gather all kinds of information on prices of corn and on the expected quantity of crop. The agency will send the data secured in proper time to Russian dealers in the different products.

Principal Dwight Clark, of a Springfield, Massachusetts, grammar school, celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday recently. He is the oldest active teacher in that city.

Fell from Scaffold and Injured His Back

Thirty years ago James C. Lee, of 1100 9th St., S. E., Washington, D. C., fell from a scaffold and seriously injured his back. In telling about it he says:—"My suffering was terrible; from the small of my back all around my stomach was just as if I had been beaten with a club. I tried all kinds of plasters belladonna, capcine and porous, without getting relief, and bought so-called electric belts, but none of them did me any good.

"One day, while working near my daughter's house, my back pained me so badly that I had to quit. I went into the house and lay down for ease. My daughter had a bottle of Sloan's Liniment in the house and she rubbed my back well with it and gave me some to take home. I used six and a half bottles of Sloan's 25c Liniment and can do as much work now as any man in the shop, although I am sixty-seven years old. I would not be without Sloan's Liniment for any consideration, and recommend it to anyone suffering pain."

A verdict of $10,000 for the loss of a leg was given Lewis R. Holland by a jury in the common pleas court, Saturday evening, after deliberating about three hours. He sued the Chicago & Erie Railroad company, the Erie Railroad company and James Bonser for $25,500, and the jury found against the first named.

This is an action that has been pending in the court for several years. In 1904, while working for the Chicago & Erie Railroad company as a machinist, Holland was run down by an engine and besides losing a leg sustained a fractured skull. In his action for damages, Holland averred that he was standing on the running-board of an engine when he was knocked off by another locomotive. Counsel for the defendant, Crissinger & Guthery, of this city, and W. O. Johnson, of Chicago, general counsel for the Erie Railroad company, claimed that Holland fell off the engine through his own carelessness, that the idea of him being knocked off the running-board of one engine by another engine was preposterous in view of the fact that the company had been using the tracks for fifteen years and that the company did not build tracks so close together that two locomotives could not safely pass. The fact that the tracks had been used for fifteen years was conclusive evidence, it was pointed out to the jury by the defendant's counsel, that the tracks were not so close together as the plaintiff represented.

The plaintiff's counsel declared that Holland, while working on the engine, was knocked off and injured by another engine. The plaintiff's counsel maintained that fifteen years ago when the tracks were built the railroad company had smaller engines and that it was possible for engines to pass in safety, but the mammoth locomotives now used by the company the space between was very small and that it would be an easy thing for a workman to meet death or serious injuries if caught between two passing engines.

The trial, which lasted several days and was one of the most bitterly-contested held in the county for years, was conducted for the plaintiff by Attorneys W. E. Scofield and Harry N. Quigley. Attorney W. P. Maloney was also interested in the case.

Charging gross neglect for three years, Carrie A. Powell, through Attorney L. E. Myers, brought action for a divorce from Henderson Powell, Saturday afternoon, in the common pleas court. The Powells were married January 22, 1906. A month later the plaintiff claims she had to leave her home and work, while her husband refused to work and frequently gambled away her earnings. She asks to be restored to her maiden name of Welch.

In the damage suit of Lewellyn Aller against Christian Gracely, an answer and cross-petition, setting up a general denial and asking that the defendant be given judgment for $75.88, has been filed in the common pleas court, through Attorneys Scofield, Durfee & Scofield. This is an action wherein the plaintiff sues to recover judgment for $1,033.81 as a result of his alleged loss due to water flooding out his oats crop on the Gracely farm, which he had rented.

In his petition the plaintiff averred that his loss was due to the negligence of the owner.

Flora B. Showen is determined to have a divorce from Napoleon A. Showen. Through Attorneys Copeland & Bartram, Saturday afternoon, she filed her fourth petition in divorce in the local courts. Her first action was brought May 12, 1899, and dismissed June 16, 1899. April 10, 1902, she brought a second action for a divorce, and this was dismissed October 8, 1902. Having apparently placed much faith in the motto, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," Mrs Showen again applied for divorce, January 19, 1903, and her petition was dismissed for a third time, November 11, 1904. Her fourth action was that of Saturday, when she charged her husband with extreme cruelty. The Showens were married October 11, 1897, and they have no children, but the defendant's son by a former marriage is, according to her petition, the principal cause of all their troubles. This son, Peter by name, has conceived a violent hatred for his stepmother, the plaintiff asserts. Once, with his father, he tried to break down the door of a room in which she had taken refuge from the rage of her husband, who, she says, has frequently cursed and abused her. An example of Peter's treatment of his stepmother is given in the petition, which declares that he insists on feeding the cat on the best carpet in the house. "He also sits hour after hour and tells about how he proposes to rob, butcher and murder different individuals." The plaintiff says that he destroys her clothing, hides her shears and many other articles just to torment her. All of his actions, she says, are approved by his father, "who," she says, "in his own playful manner, assured plaintiff that it was a pity that she was not dead." Because they had nothing to eat in the house but mush and molasses, the plaintiff says she left her husband February 11, 1909. She says her husband is employed by a wholesale grocery firm and makes good wages. She asks temporary alimony. Judge B. G. Young granted an order restraining the defendant from disposing of or incumbering any of his property.

In the matter of Lewis R. Holland against the Chicago & Erie Railroad company and others, Attorneys Crissinger & Guthery have filed a motion for a new trial. It is set up that the jury's verdict is excessive and appears to have been given under the influence of passion and prejudice, and that the court erred in its charge to the jury and in the admission of certain evidence.

On the ground of three years' wilful absence, Charles E. Osborn was granted a divorce from Cora D. Osborn, Saturday. They were married at Sandusky, September 3, 1902, and in 1905, he alleged, she left him without cause or provocation.

In the suit of Florence Curren against John I. Court for work and labor as housekeeper, the defendant has filed an answer and cross-petition. He says that he entered into an agreement with the plaintiff whereby she was to become his housekeeper on consideration for a property valued at $1,500, which he deeded her, and a note for $700 payable at his death. He declares that she violated the terms of the agreement and asks that the property be reconveyed, the note canceled and her petition dismissed. The plaintiff sued for $1,350 for wages, claiming that she was to receive five dollars a week.

MRS. C. ISSLER IS GIVEN A SURPRISE

A Pleasant Affair Near Prospect Sunday.

Mrs. C. Issler, residing about two miles east of Prospect, was given a pleasant surprise at her home, Sunday, by a company of thirty friends. The surprise was in honor of the fifty-ninth anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Issler and was complete in every way. An elaborate dinner was served and the afternoon was spent in a social way. The hostess was nicely remembered by her guests. Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Merkle and Mr. Carl Thibaut, of this city, were members of the party.

Reasons for Action.

Christopher Sipe, of Adelaide, called at the Star office, Monday, and stated that in regard to little Miss Myers, whose father, George Myers, was arrested on a charge of nonsupport recently and is now under bond, the child was well cared for, but those in charge of her thought that as her father was abundantly able to do so he should support her. He had never made any inquiry concerning her since the death of her mother it is claimed.

WILLIAM R. WADDELL IS GIVEN JUDGMENT TUESDAY

Supreme Court Affirms Decision of Circuit Court.

Sues Big Four Company for $25,500 and Secures a Judgment for $1,800 for Injuries Suffered in Accident. End of Proceeding.

William R. Waddell, of this city, will receive $1,800 from the Big Four Railroad company as a result of injuries received at the Kenton avenue crossing of the Big Four, August 6, 1903.

A week ago Tuesday, the case was argued orally in the supreme court by Attorney Harry N. Quigley, representing the Big Four, and Attorneys J. Wilbur Jacoby and William E. Scofield, counsel for Mr. Waddell. Tuesday, the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the Marion circuit court.

In January, 1906, Waddell obtained a judgment in the local common pleas court for $1,800. The defendant took it up on error to the circuit court, which affirmed the judgment of the lower court, February 21, 1907. The case was then taken up on appeal to the supreme court.

While driving in a light wagon, Mr. Waddell was caught by an evening passenger train at the Kenton avenue crossing. He tried to jump to safety, but sustained severe injuries. His escape from death was regarded as remarkable. The horse escaped injury.

Waddell sued for $25,500 damages.

SCENE AT THE BIER OF THE FRIENDLESS DEAD

Not a Funeral Note, Not a Tear Is Shed.

A Simple Prayer and the Remains of Edward Smith Are Laid To Rest in the Potters' Field—He Dies Penniless in the Infirmary.

Not a tear was shed, and only the deep, solemn voice of the minister, as he spoke the prayer which gave the dead a Christian burial, broke the silence of the chamber of death in echoes of sadness, when the funeral services of Edward Smith, aged fifty-seven years, were held in the Hess & Markert undertaking establishment, on south Main street, Friday afternoon.

Rev. J. P. Currin, pastor of the First Baptist church, who is the infirmary chaplain, officiated. He and the undertaker were the only persons present.

Afterward, Mr. Currin said that he had attended funerals, where hundreds of people thronged the church to pay a last tribute to the memory of the dead, but never had he been present at a more impressive service than the brief rites that were performed by him over the body of the man who had died, friendless and penniless, at the poor-house. The services were made doubly impressive because of the absence of mourners and the place, surrounded by coffins on all sides, wherein a last prayer for the soul of the dead was sent upward to the Maker of all.

Burial took place in the infirmary ground at the Marion cemetery. There were no services at the grave.

CITY TAXPAYERS ARE DEPRIVED OF BENEFIT

"Conscience" Money Is Ordered Placed in Pike Fund.

THE COUNTY AUDITOR OFFERS AN OBJECTION

Thinks the County Commissioners Should See to It That All Taxpayers Profit by the Money Returned to County—As It Is, Only County Taxpayers Profit.

A resolution directing that $500 "conscience" money sent to County Treasurer W. C. Wottring be placed in the pike fund has been adopted by the county commissioners, but, pending an investigation, County Auditor Charles L. Allen has refused to issue a warrant for the transfer of the money into this fund.

County Auditor Allen is of the opinion that the money ought to be placed in the general fund, where all the taxpayers of the county would derive the benefit of it, and until he can take the matter up with the prosecuting attorney he will decline to issue a pay-in order for the amount.

In ordering that the money be placed in the pike fund, the county commissioners did not consult the county auditor, but asked the prosecutor if they had the authority to direct where the money should be placed. The prosecutor informed the commissioners that they had the authority, and the resolution was accordingly adopted. The resolution was adopted on motion of Daniel Seiter, seconded by Joseph Gillespie. The three commissioners were present at the meeting and all voted for the adoption.

UNTIMELY DEATH OF ORPHA M. FOSTER

She Dies at Home of Mrs. W. D. Beck Sunday.

Orpha M. Foster, aged fourteen years, ten months and seventeen days, died of tuberculosis at the home of her aunt, Mrs. W. D. Beck, two miles south of the city, Sunday at 12:30 o'clock. The child came here about three months ago from her home at Manchester, Virginia. She realized that she was going to die and wanted to come to the home of her aunt. Her mother died in this city when the child was thirteen months old. Her father, Robert H. Foster, was with her when death closed her eyes in eternal sleep.

The deceased was born in Grand Prairie township. Several years ago Mr. Foster moved to Michigan and later to Virginia. Besides the father three brothers survive.

The funeral services were held at the First Presbyterian church, Tuesday morning, at 11:30 o'clock, George M. Rourke and Rev. G. E. Barnard officiating. Interment took place in the cemetery at Brush Ridge.

BOLD WANDERER OF THE AIR MEETS UNHAPPY END

Bald Eagle Is Killed Seven Miles North of City.

Is Found Ice-Bound in the Forks of a Tree and Farmer Slays the Bird with a Pitchfork—It Will Be Mounted for Bucyrus Lodge.

Saturday, Harry May, a conductor for the Columbus, Marion & Bucyrus Railway company, was given a large bald eagle by George Hill, a farmer, residing seven miles north of the city. It had been killed on Hill's place. May expects to mount the eagle and sell it to the Bucyrus lodge of Eagles. From wing tip to wing tip it measures seven feet and stands thirty-one inches in height. It is a most beautiful specimen.

The eagle could easily have been captured alive by Hill, who thoughtlessly killed it with a pitchfork as it sat ice-bound in the fork of a dead tree.

During the cold rain of Thursday night, the eagle had sought shelter in the tree. The water dripped down its tail and wings and, freezing formed a solid cake of ice that held the American bird of prey—the real live national emblem of the United States—a prisoner. Friday morning, Mr. Hill saw the predicament of the eagle and, securing a pitchfork, ran a prong through the big fellow's head.

For several days, the eagle had been carrying away many chickens and the farmers of that section were fearful that this spring lambs would suffer a similar fate.

BATTLE FLEET REACHES HOME

It Steams Majestically into Hampton Roads.

VERY ENTHUSIASTIC GREETING IS GIVEN

The President Is on Hand To Extend Welcome.

The Home-Coming Marks the Completion of the Greatest Voyage Ever Made by the Ships of Any Navy in the History of the World. The Reception Is in Keeping with the Occasion—A Gala Day.

Old Point Comfort, Va., Feb. 22.—Enthusiastically welcomed by the mad blowing of the whistles of a score of naval vessels and a hundred or more other ships, this only to be drowned out by the thunderous saluting of twenty-one guns from each of the sixteen battleships in the column, America's record-breaking fleet sailed majestically into Hampton Roads today.

It was the fleet's home-coming after its circumnavigation of the globe—the most remarkable continuous voyage ever made by the warships of any navy.

President Roosevelt and the secretary of the navy, who were the last to bid the fleet Godspeed when it left Hampton Roads, December 16, 1907, were the first to greet it upon its return. The president and his party of naval officers and ladies aboard the Mayflower, which was anchored off Thimble Shoal light, about seven miles out from Fort Monroe, sighted the warships as they turned in through the Virginia capes, then formally reviewed them while they passed the Mayflower in single column. When the fleet had dropped anchor in the Roads just above historic old Fort Monroe, the Mayflower steamed in among them, and Admiral Sperry, the commander-in-chief, and his flag officers and ship captains were received on board by the president. All, especially the commander-in-chief, were warmly congratulated upon the safe completion of their unprecedented cruise.

It was about 9 o'clock when the Mayflower came from down the Potomac and the Chesapeake bay and anchored near Thimble shoal, having left Washington yesterday afternoon. In the party, besides the president and Secretary Newberry, were Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Roosevelt, Mrs. Newberry, Miss Newberry, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Satterlee, Rear Admiral Cowles, chief of equipment, and Mrs. Cowles, the president's sister; Commander Simms, the president's chief naval aide, and Mrs. Simms.

Fleet Is Sighted.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the deck watch of the Mayflower discovered a column of smoke almost directly eastward over Cape Charles, and half an hour later the warships, which had been approaching under slow speed in order not to anticipate their scheduled hour of arrival, came into sight and passed the capes. At 11 o'clock the flagship, Connecticut, leading, arrived off the tail of the Horse Shoe, at which point the fleet was left by the Mayflower when it followed the battleships out of the Roads at the beginning of the cruise. A quarter of an hour later the Connecticut was off the port beam of the Mayflower at a distance of 300 yards. When opposite the Mayflower's quarter the Connecticut's six-inch guns began the official salute of twenty-one guns in honor of the navy's commander-in-chief. Less than half of these had been fired when the Kansas, the second ship in line, took up the salute, quickly followed by the others. The fleet, which has averaged about ten knots speed throughout the cruise of more than fourteen months, passed the president at eight knots, and entered the Roads at six knots.

The clock-like system by which the fleet weighed anchor and swung around with the tide to begin the cruise, was followed on the return. The Connecticut first swung into position, taking her old berth, about 800 yards off Old Point, in the line of the Jamestown exposition grounds. Two hundred and fifty yards apart all the ships of the first squadron were anchored in single column, and then began the formation of the second column, with the flagship, Louisiana, at the head. Her position was off the Connecticut's starboard, and slightly astern, the two columns being about 400 yards apart.

The Double Column.

At the foot of the first column, but at a distance of about 350 yards astern of the Rhode Island, the last ship in line, the Maine, flagship of Admiral Arnold's third squadron, which went out to the mid-Atlantic to escort the fleet home, dropped anchor. Behind her was the New Hampshire, while opposite them in the second column were the Mississippi and Idaho. Behind these, one in each column, were the armored cruisers, North Carolina and Montana, and in the rear, with one on either side and one in the center astern, were the scout cruisers, Salem, Chester and Birmingham. This squadron a week ago met the fleet about 500 miles northeast of the Bermudas. In passing the Mayflower, Admiral Arnold was about 1,000 yards behind the last ship of the main fleet, far enough away so that the battleships which made the cruise would stand out by themselves.

When the third squadron had passed, the Mayflower lifted anchor and followed slowly at a distance. Some time was necessarily consumed, owing to the current in the Roads, caused by the tide, in the ships settling into their berths. When this was completed, upon the flash of signals from the Connecticut to the Mayflower, Admiral Sperry personally greeted the president and secretary of the navy and announced that he stood ready to report the end of the cruise. This report was then made in person, Admiral Sperry being accompanied to the Mayflower in launches by the three other rear admirals of the fleet and the ship captains.

Back to Washington.

Following the president's reception of the officers, the Mayflower started back to Washington and the officers and men as many as could be spared at one time, rushed ashore, most of them to Old Point, to greet the members of their families and friends who had come from various parts of the country to welcome them home. The other officers will be given temporary shore leave in relays of about one-fourth of the number on each ship at one time, until all have had the round. After that, they will be granted such liberty as they can be spared for until the ships proceed to their home yards for docking and repairs.

As the battleships came in today looking their fittest and apparently none the worse for the wear of the long voyage of 42,227 miles, equal to almost twice the distance around the equator, the naval authorities drew a breath of relief. Not that there had been any apprehension at any time of any serious difficulties, either in the matter of navigation or possible military work to do, but because the handling of sixteen of the most modern and formidable sea-fighting engines of the world, the supplying them with coal, oil and food at the different ports where stops were made, and providing the ships with the pick of the officers and men of the navy while on foreign view, required careful and almost constant attention, from the time the cruise was first projected, in July, 1907, until the command left Gibraltar a little over two weeks ago.

The Successful Cruise.

The successful completion of the cruise without noteworthy accident or untoward incident, from either a naval or political point of view, is regarded by all nations as history-making. Never before has any battle command made such a long and practically-continuous voyage. Never before has any fleet circumnavigated the globe, whether in one or separate voyages. Never before has any armada of any of the countries of the world visited so many ports, at such great distances, in so many countries, and under so many flags? And never was any naval command received with such universal manifestations of friendly feeling, as marked the progress of the American fleet at every one of its two-score stops on the cruise around the world.

Starting out from Hampton Roads fourteen months ago in the pink of condition—or, in their spotless white and buff, more properly speaking—the sixteen great dogs of war stood ready at every moment of the twenty-four hours of every day for prompt and effective action.

"We were ready for a fight or frolic," said Rear Admiral "Fighting Bob" Evans when he surrendered the command of his fleet to the rear admiral next in rank, "and God be thanked that we had none of the fighting to do." Although there was no fighting, still it was not a continuous frolic, for there was much work to do constantly in the way of accomplishing the stated primary object of the cruise—to increase the general cruising and team efficiency of the ships as unites and as one solid command.

No Fight Expected.

Truth is, no fight was expected, so there has been no disappointment on this score. The work was expected, so there has been no cry of undue hardship. But there were several very important things accomplished by the fleet on its cruise which were not anticipated. Whether there was political mission to be fulfilled, either in the Far East, Europe or elsewhere, does not concern the navy—that comes under the head of "foreign relations" or "international diplomacy." But it was a source of great comfort to the navy as a fighting arm of the government to know that the fleet, on a peaceful errand, was able to render more assistance than could have been given by any other country to the stricken people of Sicily in the recent earthquake disaster.

It was also a matter of pride to the government that a portion of the fleet was able to visit China at the time the Boxer indemnity was remitted by the United States. Incidentally, it may be remarked that after discussing the question of a declaration of principles with the United States as to the attitude of this country and Japan toward China and in the Pacific, the agents of the Mikado were in a more agreeable frame of mind for affixing their signatures to the document, after the visit of the fleet to Japan.

Aside from this, all nations had opportunity properly to estimate the importance of the United States on the seas, with the result that the general international respect for this country went up on the world's market several points. Also, it is of no small moment that the new Turkish government was inspired with a greater and deeper regard for the American navy, and that as a result the Sultan sent a number of officers, including a direct heir to the throne, on the fleet to the United States, to study the battleships, American seamanship and the naval organization on shore. And not without some importance was the visit of a sub-command of the fleet to Morocco to salute the flag of the new ruler of that country and formally to recognize his government in behalf of the United States.

10,000 Mile Cruise.

After having cruised 40,000 miles, with little or no repairs to the ships during all this time, Admiral Sperry was proud to report to the navy department from Gibraltar that the entire command could go, intact, half that distance again without a single vessel necessarily being sent to dock, unless of course, the unforeseen should happen. Even naval experts, who have carefully studied all of the reports of Admiral Evans, who took the fleet around the Horn to San Francisco, and of Admiral Sperry, who brought it home, are at a loss as to how to measure accurately the real value of the great cruise from a naval or military point of view.

It was an ideal fleet as it started out from Hampton Roads. It is altogether likely that more careful attention was given to putting each vessel into the best possible condition than might have been done prior to the regular southern winter cruise to Cuban waters, but at that the report of Admiral Evans, based on reports of the admirals and captains of his fleet was most surprising when he said that every ship arrived at Magdalena bay, Mexico, after the first 14,000 miles even in better fighting condition than when it left the Atlantic coast.

This was borne out to the satisfaction of all by the marvelous work of the big guns in the spring target practice when the best previous records of the American and all other navies were safely eclipsed. Although all of the battleships are docked twice each year, the regular docking on the Pacific coast after that cruise showed a smaller average of necessary work in minor repairs than usual.

Second Stage of Cruise.

The second stage of the cruise—from San Francisco to Australia, Japan, China and Manila—was several thousand miles longer than the first, so it was still more surprising that on the target practice at Manila last fall the big guns of the fleet should increase their former record by fully fifty per cent. The semi-annual docking nearly always takes place following the spring and fall target practice. Frequently, in the North Atlantic and in Cuban waters minor accidents have occurred during the work of the heavy guns. It is not unusual for decks, to be weakened, for a gun to be cracked, for a turret to become loosened to some extent, and flare-backs and fatal explosions even occasionally result. In April, 1906, several men were killed by the ignition of powder on the Kearsarge at Guantanamo; in July, 1907, several others perished because of a flare-back on the Georgia in Cape Cod bay. But at Magdalena bay and Manila bay there was no untoward accident of any nature.

At Rio de Janeiro and Callao, the fleet found yellow fever and other dreaded epidemics; at Manila, there was cholera; at Amoy, there was cholera; at Singapore and Colombo, there were cholera, smallpox and yellow fever; at Messina, pestilence followed in the wake of the earthquake and fire. Yet no epidemic struck the fleet. Although there were a number of deaths, the casualty list, navy officials state, was scarcely in increase over what normally it is in home waters for a like number of men. A few lives were lost by accidents, some on board ship, and some while the victims were on shore liberty.

A Remarkable Feature.

A remarkable feature of the cruise was the excellent discipline. Although there were a few desertions, the number was far less in proportion than it usually is in home ports. The extent of drinking on the part of men and officers at receptions and while on liberty in strange and peculiarly interesting places was far less than was expected. It can not be denied that the strain of the long cruise, in fair weather and bad, and with tedious vigils before the bridge was a severe test. Many of the men and several of the officers succumbed to temptation, and paid the penalty. But the number of courts-martial on the whole has been scarcely more than might have been expected had the world voyage not been undertaken.

On charges involving intoxication, conduct unbecoming a gentleman, etc., there were fourteen trials and twelve convictions, from the time the fleet left Hampton Roads to its arrival at Gibraltar. The last and most notable of all of these cases was that of Qualtrough the Georgia's captain. After having been wined and dined all around the world, Captain Qualtrough overstepped the limit at Tangier, while his ship was honoring the new government of Morocco. A special license might have been granted for an occasion like that, and any officer less than a captain or above that of a midshipman or ensign might have been excused for drinking once too often to the health of the new sultan. Midshipmen and ensigns are as carefully watched, and in fact, more so, than the older officers. They are young, and they must learn to carry their wine well. True, a rear admiral and even a captain might ship a bit too much liquid and none be the wiser, if he should keep within his own cabin. But even the suspicion of intoxication on the part of the captain of a ship on shore particularly in a foreign port or at a dinner abroad, where the powers of the world are represented, means necessarily the downfall of the offender.

Staff Officers at Fault.

No other officer above the grade of lieutenant commander fell from grace on the entire cruise; in fact, most of those brought up on charges were in or below the grade or rank of lieutenant. It may be significant, perhaps, that while about three-fourths of the officers on the fleet are line officers, more than half the number against whom various charges were made, were staff officers. These represented the medical and pay departments and were not products of the naval academy.

The excellent conduct of the enlisted men has been a marvel at the navy department. While the teaching of the navy always has been for the moral uplift and general world-education of the blue-jacket, the high standard he maintained on this cruise is regarded as principally due to the fatherly interest in "his boys" of Admiral Evans on the first leg of the trip. Although doubtless hundreds of the new recruits had visions of a continuous frolic in foreign ports, of being entertained, of loading themselves with the various intoxicants and foods of the world, of being hauled in rickshaws and basking in the smiles of Geisha girls, they were brought to realize the seriousness of the whole business when the fleet circulars from the flagship reached them. Not only were they admonished to be on their best behavior at all times ashore as well as on ship, but they were inspired by these communications and the admiral's public speeches to a proper sense of duty and moral conduct.

High-Class Personnel.

The high class of the enlisted personnel has had perhaps as much as anything to do with advertising the formidability of the fleet abroad. Foreign officials who viewed the fleet are on record as having been won with a greater respect for the United States when they gazed on the splendid engines of war in their ports, and this respect was increased when they realized the high type of young men whose places in battle would be behind the guns. These were the men, who at Magdalena bay and later at Manila bay, shot straighter with the six to twelve-inch guns than any other men in the world.

Commander Fullam, secretary of the president's naval commission, is supposed to know something about making good sailors. Fullam is the commandant of the naval training station at Newport, Rhode Island, and more than half the men on the fleet have passed through that school. Some were there but a few weeks, while others took months to grasp the work expected of them.

"I have studied the enlisted men of the navies of the world," said Commander Fullam to the house naval committee recently, "and the American sailor is the best, the quickest to learn and the most reliable in his action, of any of them. The days of the drunken, shiftless, law-escaping sailor has passed." European papers have re-echoed this praise in news dispatches from the Mediterranean ports and in editorials.

A Valuable Education.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Newberry, Admiral Pillsbury, chief of navigation; Admiral Dewey, president of the general board—in fact, all naval authorities agree that aside from any good political effect of the world cruise, it was a valuable education for the officers and men in travel and in the meeting of their fellows in other navies, and, what is still more important, it has proven invaluable in the matter of training for the operation of warships and guns for the purpose for which they were made. The cruising radius of the big warships could never have been so fully tested in home waters.

The training of officers and men to work together on any one ship itself was important, but far more so was the team work—the concerted action, of the ships as units, as divisions, as squadrons, as a homogeneous fleet. Battle tactics, which never but once before the cruise had been successfully carried out—because, for the most part, of the incompleteness of the fleet—were indulged in at various stages of the voyage, from the beginning to the end.

Was the value of the cruise equal to the additional expense to the government occasioned by it? The president and his naval chiefs declared from the beginning that it would be and now, it was—many times over. Congress, always skeptical as to heavy expenses, at last, apparently, is satisfied with the answer.

Difference in Cost.

Precisely how much greater was the cost of maintaining the fleet on this cruise than it would have been under normal cruising conditions in Atlantic home waters, is difficult to estimate. The principal item of increased cost was that of coal consumption. This increase, as nearly as Admiral Cowles, chief of equipment, is able to estimate it, will amount in all, to about $1,300,000. Since the usual appropriation of $5,000,000 for all equipment purposes sufficiently meets the requirements, it was necessary for a deficiency appropriation of $1,300,000 to be voted by congress for the additional coal bill. Much of this extra cost was in transporting the coal, which had to be shipped from the Atlantic coast to the various ports around South America, and to Honolulu, Australia, Manila, Japan and Gibraltar. Some native coal at points on the cruise was used, but none was so good as the American product. The last shipment, to Gibraltar, consisted of about 22,000 tons. Approximately 365,000 tons were consumed on the entire cruise, the total cost of which was about $2,600,000.

The cost of oil was an important item, running perhaps near to $100,000, and this, due to the almost continuous running of the ships, is reckoned as possibly double the amount that was burned by the same number of ships in the same period of time just prior to the cruise.

Very Little Increase.

A bigger item of expense than this was that of provisions for the blue jackets, but this represents little increase—not more than two to five per cent. of the whole. All the provisions were carried in naval supply ships and most were purchased in the Atlantic and Pacific coast markets. Such fresh provisions as were necessary to put in Manila, Japan, Colombo, Port Said and Mediterranean ports represented somewhat lower prices than were paid in the American markets. Possibly greater care was taken in the selection of foods than usual, owing to the long cruise and the supposed dangers in the way of diseases that might be encountered, yet the set allowance of $.3475 a day for each man was never exceeded. The average daily cost of provisions was $451.75, and the cost of feeding the men for the entire cruise was approximately $195,000.

The technical branches of the navy profited by the cruise as well as the navigating branches. Naval constructors who accompanied the fleet to San Francisco came off with many ideas as to future construction, some of which are being incorporated in the North Dakota and Delaware, and still more in the Utah and Florida. These relate to improvement in the width and location of the water-line armor belt, the placing of turrets on the newer ships, the cooling of the magazines, wireless telephone communication, fire control and many other important features. Such changes along these lines as could not be made during the cruise, will immediately follow the fleet's return.

The mail reports from Admiral Sperry, prepared while at Gibraltar, show that remarkably little repairing is necessary. The vessels will all be docked and scraped, and while some may require considerable overhauling, others will need hardly any attention at all.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WELCOMES RETURN OF THE BATTLESHIP FLEET FROM ITS CRUISE AROUND THE WORLD.

Everybody connected with the navy department and the government generally is proud of the fine record of the battleship fleet in its memorable cruise around the world. The armada of warships which such great preparations were made to receive on its return to Hampton Roads is the finest and most powerful ever assembled under the flag of a single officer. With the convoy of cruisers and battleships that went out to meet Rear Admiral Sperry's globe circling squadron the entire fleet numbers twenty-four vessels. The fleet sailed from Hampton Roads on Dec. 16, 1907, and traveled approximately 45,000 miles.

Dayton Toughs Make Attack on a Greek Store.

Dayton, O., Feb. 23.—A billiard hall and candy store owned by two Greeks was attacked by a crowd of men and boys, in the West End here, and the front of the building completely demolished. The mob gathered in a neighboring vacant lot and made the assault with stones, bricks and revolvers, firing into the building and narrowly missing about 20 girls who were gathered there. The riot continued until the arrival of the police.

know of two women at this mo- nt who have lost their positions, because they could not do the k, but because they went about with sour faces and held themselves "above" those with whom they worked.

Snobs do not get along well in the business world.

Keep a smiling face, and it will make you friends wherever you go.

Also, and here is another bit of advice, do not repeat what has been told you, whether in confidence or not.

Snobs do not get along well.

You never can tell how it is going to be twisted and mangled in the repetition.

That's where men get ahead of us; they know how to keep their mouths shut.

A great art, that!

I like people who do things, either men or women, but, ye gods and little fishes, how I eternally despise those who say they would like to do them and stop at that.

No one has ever accomplished anything in this world by thinking about it in a half hearted way. And when you have several things in mind you don't accomplish any of them.

The brain is like a very small patch of ground. Only one vegetable, or at the very most two, can be cultivated therein, and you must be very sure to keep the little space free from weeds or what you are trying to cultivate will be choked out of existence.

It is a good thing to know what to eliminate. For instance, if you are trying to be a business woman you have neither the time nor the strength to make your own clothes, and you must not allow yourself to be tempted into trying it.

I have heard girls who were in very restricted circumstances say they wanted so much to earn money. And yet these same young women would arise at all hours, spend the day in shopping and making useless calls and stay up late talking about nothing at all. What time there was left they would devote to finding situations.

Then there is another class which wants you to find positions for it. I could run a position agency if I wanted to, look up places for people, steer them into the offices, tell them how to do their work and in the end do the work, I suppose.

It is an awful task, waking the dead, but, my friends, as I have often remarked, it is a blessing of Providence that there are so many dead ones. Think of the competition we would have to face if all of us were alive.

Allow nothing to interfere with digestion.

I have a certain amount of sympathy with "slow" people if they hurt only themselves, but I know of cases where women are too "genteel" to engage in any but certain vocations, and until they find these they are being supported by their male relatives.

These gentlemen are not at all anxious to do, mind you, as they have in most cases families of their own, but they must or the aristocratic ones will surely allow themselves to starve rather than degrade (?) themselves.

Indigestion Caused by Hurry.

"I allow nothing to interfere with my digestion," said a woman to me the other day when I remarked that it was getting late. She sat back for a few minutes and rested quietly after her lunch. "I would no more think of rushing off madly after eating than I would think of cutting my throat," she observed.

"But what do you do when you are in a hurry?"

"I always make it a point to take time for meals. I find that I am the gainer in the end, but if through unforeseen circumstances I find the minutes too limited I go without my lunch. Better that than to cram myself with undigested food."

I think she is right.

PROSPERITY NOTES.

The idle car test brings prosperity several degrees nearer. The last fortnightly report shows that 21,355 freight cars which had been weathering on the side tracks had been put into service. There is still left something more than 300,000 cars lacking cargoes, but this is not considered a discouraging number when to the depression are added the quiet times that ordinarily prevail at this season. The big point is that traffic conditions have so improved that nearly 22,000 cars can be called into commission in the course of two weeks.

The mild winter has kept a great number of coal cars empty, yet 1,000 more were transferred from the idle column to the active lists. The efficiency committee of the American Railway association reports that on many of the lines conditions have been restored to the normal. A few roads actually have been short on means of transportation, though the shortage has been insignificant.

Another prosperity item is the news that the Westinghouse plants from San Francisco to London have made a restoration of wages amounting to a half million dollars monthly. The increases became known from slips placed in the envelopes of the employes. The company displayed admirable restraint in failing to take advantage of this fact to gain credit with labor to the injury of an uncompromising competitor.

The Steel corporation has made the declaration that it cannot hope for an increase in business until the revision of the tariff has been finally decided. However, the trust maintains its prices, though the independent companies have made cuts and thus placed several large orders. It would seem that the Steel corporation is determined to make its fifteen dollars per ton on its production on nothing.—Toledo Blade.

SPIRIT OF MODERATION.

The Japanese of San Francisco who comment in print on the agitation against them are certainly most discreet. Secretary Katiama, speaking on behalf of the Japanese vice consul, Takuhashi, says: "We feel grieved that the assembly passed this [the education] bill." There are no reproaches, no threats, nothing but the hope that the senate will not pass the bill or that, if the senate does, the governor will veto it. There is no contribution at all to the prevailing passion and, by contrast, the Japanese stand out as far more self-possessed than their opponents. And then there is that letter of the Japanese student who was assaulted on the campus of the University of California, to President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, asking that he cease the inquiry that he began to discover the identity of the assailants. In halting English he expresses thanks for the interest of President Wheeler in the case and gives as a reason for his request that he wants "not to exaggerate such small trouble, nor to lead it into some international question" and especially desires "that the Californians are not so sensitive about Japanese problem."

If that letter does not change the sentiment of the California university students toward the Japanese, they are not the American boys we take them for. It has in it the American spirit of manliness and forbearance and proves that he is worthy of better treatment than he seems to have received. And all this, as far as we have been able to see, is illustrative of the entire Japanese attitude with regard to the trouble.—Columbus Dispatch.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Rev. Asbury Wilkinson, said to have been perhaps the oldest Methodist minister in the entire country, both in years and in point of service, died at Lake Charles, Louisiana, recently.

Princess George of Greece, who was Princess Marie Bonaparte, has astonished the people of Greece by going in for classic gowns. Her Salome costumes are very scant as to dry goods, but elaborate as to jewels.

It is reported that Associate Justice Peckham, of the United States supreme court, will retire shortly after March 4. Judge Peckham reached the retiring age, seventy years, some time ago, but postponed retirement, it is said, in order that Judge Taft might appoint his successor.

Richard A. Ballinger, of Seattle, who is mentioned for the position of secretary of the interior in President Taft's cabinet, is about fifty years of age and a lawyer by profession. He has served as county judge, as mayor of Seattle, and as a commissioner of the general land office.

Miss Fannie Bixby, one of the richest girls in California, has become a full-fledged policeman. She received an appointment as deputy of a Long Beach constable, and came to Los Angeles to take the oath of office and to receive her star. It will be the only jewel that she wears.

Joseph Lambert, who won the cross of the Legion of Honor for bravery in battle while in the French army during the reign of Napoleon III., died recently of cerebral apoplexy in Brooklyn. He was seventy-seven years old. He came to this country in 1861 for the purpose of joining the union army and served throughout the war.

Conently a memory of her wit and ning is more to be prized than the ortunity of looking at a statue pering her dearth of physical charm. s the cost of the statue to Mme. de el will be great and the money to raised entirely among women inested in the movement, there is litcause for anxiety that the scheme materialize. The object of these ary women is doubtless to bring nselves into public notice.

ppearing at an opportune moment en the new woman in all her ses is being discussed comes the ent book of Dr. Reich, "Woman ough the Ages." And, judging from wild conversations one hears in ns and from English and Ameriplatforms, it is obvious that many nest supporters of the woman ques- are under the impression that are struggling for the first time the history of the world for the ncipation of their sex. Dr. Reich's k will speedily dispel any such illon.

Smart Trousseau Gown.

peaking of marriage reminds me of smart gown I saw recently which find its way into the trousseau of American bride. The costume sisted of a skirt and coat of dull wn cloth and a blouse to match of spotted net and guipure. The de of brown was peculiar. It might described as nut brown with a ge of taupe. There was a good deal handsome soutache braiding in silk the picturesque coat, and the net d for the blouse was of the exact de of the cloth. The blouse was anged in a series of half inch tucks over, and the sleeves were treated the same way. At the throat it was in a modest round to show a delie guimpe of mechlin net in the e "old lace" shade, and this guimpe s finished off with a specially high ped collar adorned on the upper e with a plaited frill of mechlin e. This was a perfectly stunning tume, although the description may ive the idea that a whole dress in dull shade of brown would be moonous, but such was far from the e. The mingling of fine cloth adsome silk braid, soft net and pure, all in exactly the same shade, s delightful, and the little touch of amy white at the throat added a st effective finishing touch. I must neglect to say that there was a y narrow tie of black taffeta enoling the lace collar.

A pretty blouse included in this ousseau was of fine spotted net in charming old ivory tone. It was ahioned in a series of half inch cks all over the bodice and sleeves. In the old lace shades these blouses look well with tailor made gowns of almost every color, and they are more uncommon than the lace blouse even when the latter is "Irish" of the very best quality. The large spotted net which was in such favor some months ago is no longer fashionable.

Mme. Agnes here in Paris makes a specialty of smart waists and blouses, and a visit to her atelier yesterday revealed some exquisite models for spring and summer wear. There was the usual assortment of strictly tailored models and dainty lingerie affairs, but there was something new, a stunning combination of the two styles. It contains the best features of both. These waists are made with great simplicity and trimmed mostly with tucking. They are opened down the front, but, unlike most blouses that open in front, have attached collars. These collars are of the tucked to match the rest of the and also open in front or, rather, at the side. They are edged with narrow cluny lace and are very trim and smart looking. One attractive waist made on this model was of dotted mull showing fine pin dots of blue on a white ground.

There is a white wash crape, half silk, half cotton, that Agnes is using for many of her tailored blouses, which are made up in a plain style, opening in front and trimmed with insertion of cluny and Irish laces. On the lingerie blouses the smartest ones are ornamented with Irish and cluny lace showing no design. This is the high water mark of fashion in laces.

In colored wash crepon I saw lovely blouses decorated in stiff little wreath designs carried out in a two tone stenciled scheme harmonizing in color with the materials employed. An occasional touch of green is introduced in the foliage. A mauve blouse of wash crepon ornamented with wreaths formed of Parma violets was fetching, and a gray blouse patterned with bunches of coral honeysuckle was an old fashioned conceit that proved altogether charming. I noticed in lace blouses a reversal of the old custom order where chiffon has been used. The fad is now to cover the all over lace waist with chiffon, and I must admit that the effect is decidedly pretty. The vague glimpse of the dentelle through the chiffon veiling is bewitching.

From this display I gathered that tailored waists of heavy colored linen would be smart in the spring. There was a fetching shirt waist of leather brown, with a scarcely visible stripe in the weave, that would be very good style if worn with a brown coat and skirt suit.

If you haven't seen the new spring fabrics that have just been opened in the shops, why, in the slang of the moment, "take a day off, Mary Ann," and haunt the magazines. You will be impressed with the number of dark materials that have been selected for warm weather wear. Many of them are dark, almost black in the wool goods. And it is somewhat of a surprise after the prolonged reign of stripes, checks and blotchy things to see plain surfaces predominate. There are a few one tone striped effects, but checks are not in favor at this early stage of the fashion game except in the thin stuffs where bayadere stripes in one tone are among the new things.

In silks, chiffon weight bengaline seems to take the lead, and one is made happy by a delightful display of our old time love, the small patterned foulard silk. In this favorite material geometrical designs in modest proportions are to the fore. Some of these foulards and chiffon taffetas have inch wide satin borders of plain color, and soutache patterned foulards are shown in great numbers.

No pleasure comes from liquor with life

SOME FIGURES ON A WHISKY RECEIPT

One Concern Sells 5,329 Gallons Here Since October 26.

AMOUNT OF WHISKY DRINKING IN CITY

One Distilling Company Gets $21,316 Cash from City Since It Goes Dry. More Than 100 Concerns Doing Wholesale Business Here—Effect of Law on Whisky Traffic.

A receipt for one gallon of rye whisky from an Ohio distilling company given a Marion man a couple of days' ago leads to some interesting figures as to the amount of business which may be done by John Barleycorn in the city since Marion county was voted into the dry column.

The receipt shows that the liquor was delivered to dry town, No. 929, Marion, and the serial number of the order is 5,329. Whenever a town falls into the dry list it is given a number by the distilleries, that they may check up the result of their advertising by the number of orders received. This particular distillery claims to furnish a high-grade product for which it charges four dollars a gallon, express prepaid, and liquor delivered at the home or business place of the consumer. All money must accompany orders, and no order for less than one gallon is filled. Following out the figures this distillery has apparently sold at least 5,329 gallons of whisky for $21,316 cash in the city since October 26, 1908.

It is claimed that more than 100 distilleries and whisky houses are doing a business in the city on the same terms, but some sell their products for less money than the one mentioned and many do not sell anything like so much.

The trade mentioned is of course largely confined to those who drink at home and do not patronize the bar-keepers.

A woman with fine arms takes it for granted that you will understand they aren't the only thing built that way.

The man who lies down on you never has any standing at all.

FATHER ARRESTED FOR AN UNNATURAL CRIME

Harry Kennedy Is Brought Here from Dayton.

Harry Kennedy, about forty-five years of age, a member of the petit jury, was arrested in Dayton, Monday night, and brought here, Tuesday morning, by Humane Officer J. W. Ush and Jerome Hostetler, lieutenant of the Erie railroad police, to answer to a charge of outraging his daughter, Helen, aged eleven years. The affidavit against Kennedy was filed in the court of Justice Charles H. Conley, November 29, by Humane Officer Ush, after he had conducted a thorough investigation, in which he was assisted by Dr. R. C. M. Lewis, president of the Marion County Humane society.

Kennedy denies the charge.

At the time that Kennedy disappeared an affidavit was sworn against him with failing to provide for his young daughter. This was published to mislead the father, and the facts in the case were suppressed by the newspapers.

Through an accident, Humane Officer Ush discovered Kennedy's whereabouts and went to Dayton, accompanied by Detective Hostetler, Monday morning. Kennedy was located at No. 118 south Jefferson street, where under the name of J. S. King, he was working as a night clerk in a restaurant.

Kennedy was arraigned before Justice Conley, Tuesday afternoon, about 1 o'clock. He waived preliminary examination and was held to the grand jury in the sum of $7,500 bond.

THE LODGE WORLD.

A very enjoyable card party was given by the K. of P. in celebration of Washington's birthday anniversary in their hall on east Center street, Monday night. It was a stag affair, and more than 100 members of the lodge and their friends were present. A series of seventeen games of euchre was played, Thomas Lucas being the prize winner. He won thirteen games. Souvenir favorets were placed at every table. A spread was served following the play at cards.

The hall was prettily decorated with streamers of red white and blue, and a large picture of the five presidents was conspicuously arranged at one end.

The committee on arrangements was composed of George H. Dalton, H. L. Shaw and Jacob Mark.

THE MANHATTAN.

RAILROAD.

O. W. Walker, an Erie freight fireman suffered a terrible accident, Saturday afternoon, while attending to his duties on a fast eastbound freight. His train was passing a westbound freight, which was on a siding near Foraker. The fireman was leaning out of the cab window waiting for a signal from the rear brakeman. Suddenly he was struck in the head and face and knocked to the floor of the engine. The engineer stopped the train and rushed over to his dazed fireman's assistance. The man was found terribly mangled about the face and head. There were large gashes in his nose, ear and right side of his face besides some terrible cuts in his head. A surgeon was secured and the wounds dressed. He was taken to his home in Huntington on passenger, No. 15. Investigation showed that a piece of tin, used for patching purposes on a box car of the train on the siding had broken loose and was dangling at the side. This was what struck the man.

The work of testing the new steel cars that are being delivered to the Erie by the Ralston Steel company of Columbus was started, Monday. T. Romney, mechanical superintendent of the Erie, and his assistant, E. A. Westcott arrived in the city, Sunday evening in Erie private car, No. 301 and representatives of the Westinghouse Air-Brake company are here. The first train went out Monday morning.
